FORMER CHAIRMAN SYNAN, FOSS MAN, OUT FOR HAMLIN

James W. Synan of Pittsfield, former chairman of the Democratic State Committee and an ardent Foss man, came out in a statement to-day warmly endorsing Charles S. Hamlin for the Democratic nomination for Governor.

"Charles S. Hamlin," declared Mr. Synan, "is the man to whom Democrats all over Massachusetts should now turn as their hope and safest candidate, and I cordially endorse him."

MOST IMPORTANT DEVELOPMENT IN TANGLE.

This stand taken by Mr Synan is regarded in political circles as one of the most important developments of the political tangle that followed the Faneuil Hall convention which nominated Frederick W. Mansfield as the head of the ticket pro tem.

It was largely through the work of Mr. Synan that the Democratic party of the State was whipped into shape after the disastrous convention at Springfield. He is the leader of the party in the western part of the State.

This is Mr. Synan's elevated statement:

"The refusal of Chairman F. J. Macleod and Joseph A. Maynard of the nominating committee of four, appointed by the State convention, and who are very friendly to Mr. Foss, to accept as the fifth member of the committee such men as Judges Aiken, DeCourcey, Braley, Fessenden, ex-Judge Lilley and General Charles H. Taylor, and their determination to force a ballot or another convention upon the delegates, with four days dangerous and costly delay when every minute counts, and when our party is in danger of disruption, with the evident determination also of some Boston leaders to rule or ruin, forces me to the conclusion that Charles S. Hamlin is the man to whom Democrats all over Massachusetts should now turn as their best hope and safest candidate, and I cordially endorse him."

Mr. Synan was asked:

"What is your opinion of the unsolicited method of choosing a nominee for Governor?"

His reply was:

Would Choose Fifth Member.

"Personally I am in hearty favor of choosing a fifth member of the committee, as the best means of nominating a man for Governor. That would be the best way in my opinion. I do not think we should have lost this valuable time by mailing letters to delegates."

To the question of his attitude toward Mr. Foss, Mr. Synan replied:

"I can say nothing at the present time, and I would give no statement until I had thought over the matter. I do not think I would like to make such a statement. I have nothing personal against Mr. Foss. It is true that I was in favor of Mr. Foss.

"I am now heartily in favor of Mr. Hamlin, because I think he would make the best run for Governor. I should be glad to see him nominated. But I'll stand by any man nominated by the party. No matter who wins the Democratic nomination, I will willingly support him and do my share of work to elect him Governor of this State."

READVILLE RACE TRACK, Readville, Oct. 14.—Before a big crowd, wrought to a high pitch of excitement, a dozen daring auto drivers began a speed battle here this afternoon that promised to produce enough thrills to test the patrons of the course for a long time.

It was believed that several records would be broken, and the fashionable host that thronged the grand stand and settled in clever spots to watch the contests were nerved to a keen point in anticipation of the competition being before the races started.

The crowd began to reach here shortly after noon. They came for the most part in smart automobiles. As the 2 o'clock hour approached the machines rolled in by the score. There were all kinds and all makes.

Weather Conditions Ideal.

The weather conditions were delightful. It was a fine day for outside sport. There being just enough of the tang of the Fall in the air to make one enjoy the sunshine that blazed from a somewhat hazy sky.

The contestants were on the circular course warming up shortly after noon. They whizzed around at a mile a minute rate, giving a prophecy of what they would do when the real trying moments were reached.

The one-hour race was the feature of the day's program. The honk-honk wagons that were to participate in this competition were to spin road-run condition, period into condition in which they could make the most of their lives.

Some very exciting moments were expected in the five-mile class races. These promised great enjoyment because of the fact that the results could be learned in such a short time.

Drivers Have Records.

All the drivers have established records on the track and road, and are recognized as the best among the local operators. Charlie Basle, of course, with his world's record established at Providence, and his record with the Vanderbilt, has the greater experience of any driver and such men as Dewey will drive the Simpler; Crittenden will be at the wheel of the American; Donahue, who will handle the Moon, and Fisher with a Knox, and Kingsley Thomas, who have already won fame at Readville and elsewhere.

Goldfish, who was originally to drive in this contest, will be absent from the grandstand and sidelines, as he could not secure Jack Johnson, and consequently arrived in Boston yesterday. He is prevented from driving in the big latest edict from the controlling board of the American Automobile Association that has caused his temporary retirement from active participation in the meeting.

Goldfish, when asked what he thought about the A. A. A. ruling, said: "I think it is because of the public statement I would race Jack Johnson, sanction, said: "I think it is premature to discuss that race. The contest board of the A. A. A. was aware of the action that is taken, and believing that this board is going to do that which is right, I feel no discuss the matter at this time beyond saying that I think an error of judgment, if nothing more, has been answered.

CHILDREN RESCUED AT FIRE

A six-months-old baby and two panic stricken children were saved from suffocation in a fire on the third floor of the five-story brick tenement at No. 20 Grove street, West End, to-day, by Mrs. Fannie Splitsky. To reach the children it was necessary for her to break down a door and then carry the baby and the two children to the street.

The children were Julius, Abrahams and Annie Goldstein. Julius is aged three years, Abraham two years and Annie six months. Their mother, Mrs. Max Goldstein, went to a nearby store, leaving the three children playing about the stove in the kitchen.

The stove was red hot and a defective flue caught fire. The smoke began to roll out into the room and the children laughed in glee. The room began to fill with the heavy smoke and the children could not find the doorway. An iceman on the street saw the smoke coming from the windows and yelling "fire!" started to ring in an alarm.

Mrs. Splitsky lives on the second floor of the building just under the apartment of the Goldsteins. She heard the cry of "fire!" and opening the door found the hall filled with smoke. She told her two children to run out into the street. They obeyed.

Then she rushed up into the smoke-filled hallway on the third floor. She heard the faint cries of the children in the kitchen. The door was locked, but she managed to break it down.

Finding up little Annie, who, almost overcome by the smoke, was lying on the floor, she managed to lift the baby, the two children and bear them to the street.

3 OF FAMILY DEAD, 2 DYING, OF GAS

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—Practically an entire family was wiped out by gas early to-day in Brooklyn. Adolph Kunz, his son, George and daughter Clara were found dead in their home; Mrs. Kunz and a son, William, were found dying and were rushed to the German hospital, where no hope is held out for their recovery. The tragedy was caused by a leaking gas stove. From the position of Kunz's body it is believed that she was awakened by the smell of gas, and in a state of subconsciousness wandered through the rooms to waken her parents and brothers, falling when she reached her father's room.

TWO MEN HELD IN SHOPLIFTING CASE

James F. Lawton, alias Flynn and Lynn, and Edward Flaherty, alias Sullivan, who said they lived in South Boston, were in the Municipal Court to-day, charged with stealing a pair of trousers from a downtown department store yesterday. Both men are accused of being old offenders, and of having served time in the House of Correction. Their pictures are in the Rogues' Gallery. They were captured after an exciting chase in a store on Elliot street by Louis Heindl and Charles Drake, department store detectives, and turned over to Patrolman Manning of the City Hall avenue station.

FIND STAB WOUND IN VICTIM'S BODY

The police are to-day investigating the death of John Brinkman, thirty-eight, whose body was found on the third floor of Houghton's brewery in Roxbury, just after 8 o'clock last night. Medical Examiner Leary viewed the body, and it was turned over to Undertaker Waterman. It was at first thought he had died of hemorrhage. To-day the undertaker discovered a deep stab wound in the neck. Dr. Leary was again notified and he ordered the body transferred to the City Hospital morgue for an autopsy. Brinkman lived at No. 749 Parker street, Dorchester.

LOUIS RESTELLI

WHITE CIRCLES CAPITOL'S DOME IN WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14. Officials of the State, War and Navy Departments and attaches of the White House deserted their tasks to-day to watch Clarence Whitney, the English aviator, circle the dome of the capitol in his aeroplane.

Though the most daring flight ever made in the vicinity of this city, it was made unannounced.

Rising gracefully from the Benning Race Track, the aviator directed his speedy flight toward the city, several miles away. His machine worked perfectly.

He flew direct to the capitol, circled gracefully about the dome, and then started away toward the Washington monument. Rising to a height of about 2,000 feet he performed several rapid evolutions in the air, and then circled gracefully to the landing place vacant lot near the White House.

The roofs were black with people as he descended at 11:20 o'clock, and the tens of thousands who saw his machine worked perfectly cheered lustily.

QUINCY SLAYER A SUICIDE

The body of Louis G. Restelli, the Quincy murderer, was found in the water of a quarry hole early this afternoon by two policemen.

Restelli had apparently committed suicide. His hands were handcuffed together and weighted by two pneumatic hammers that weighed about seventy-five pounds.

In the belt of the dead man were his two thirty eight-calibre revolvers, fully loaded, and a sheath knife.

The body was taken to the morgue and there fully identified as that of the missing murderer who shot and killed his mother, his business friend, Henry E. Hardwig, and wounded his brother and another friend.

GREAT HURRICANE SWEEPING THE GULF

HAVANA, Oct. 14.—The full force of the hurricane which has been sweeping over Cuba and the Gulf struck here this afternoon. All business has been suspended. The wind tore the roofs off buildings and uprooted trees. Several persons were reported injured. Ships are ashore on the coast.

200 LIVES LOST IN NORTH SEA

LONDON, Oct. 14.—Two hundred lives are believed to have been sacrificed to the fury of the tempest which has swept the British coast of the North Sea for the past two days.

The steamship Cranford went down at sea, and it is almost certain that all on board perished. Twenty-five bodies have already been washed ashore to-day at Hartlepool, all of them encased in life belts marked "Cranford." All were members of the crew.

It is thought that many other craft of various sizes have foundered in the storm, and the loss of life will probably prove the heaviest recorded in a decade.

Fishing Boats Lost.

Fishing boats have been dashed to pieces upon the rock bound coast on both sides of the German Ocean, and even the large liners have had the greatest difficulty in making port.

A dispatch from Cricketh, Wales, says that six men were drowned in the wreck of two fishing boats of that port.

The washing ashore of a score of the bodies of sailors was the first intimation received of the catastrophe that overwhelmed the steamship Cranford. The fact that the men were life preservers convinced the coast guards that the Big craft had gone to the bottom, unable to survive the terrific power of the tempest.

Swamped in Life Boats?

Soon after five more bodies were washed ashore. As the bodies were those of the crew it was believed that the seamen took possession of the lifeboats when the vessel became doomed. The lifeboats had been swamped either by too heavy loading or else by the high sea which was running.

Boats were put out bearing life savers in hope of picking up survivors from the foundered.

The Cranford was a steel built vessel constructed by the Gray Shipbuilding Company of this place in 1898. She was a new rigged ship and modernly equipped. She sailed from London and was owned by the marine firm of Pyman Brothers. She has been in the trade continuously for a score of years and plied to Atlantic ports.

'DAKOTA DAN' BEGINS NEW FIGHT TUESDAY

'Dakota Dan Russell, who says that he is the rightful heir to the Russell fortune of Melrose, will again be in the limelight, beginning Tuesday, when, before Justice Morton of the Supreme Court, he will for the second time try to establish his identity. The first hearing in the case consumed more than six months and resulted in a decision by Judge Lawton against the claimant. The weeks Senator Leslie A. Simpson of North Dakota, attorney for 'Dakota Dan,' has been preparing evidence.

ROOSEVELT OPENS NEW YORK CAMPAIGN

DUNKIRK, N. Y., Oct. 14.—Theodore Roosevelt fired the opening gun here to-day in his campaign for Robert L. Stimson, for Governor of New York. It was a terrific broadside against Tammany Hall and the Wall Street interests. The ex-President openly charged that there is a coalition between Tammany and "the interests," the purpose of which is to control the entire State.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 14.—From the way the Washington "fans" have been talking and telephoning the newspaper offices the past two days, one would almost think the world's series was started here to-day. Instead of an exhibition contest between the Athletic champions and the All-Star Americans. The grounds were crowded.

Four Washington players are on the All-Stars, and, of course, being coupled up with the best in the country, added to the attractiveness of the occasion.

The weather continued warm and pleasant. The two teams reached the Arlington Hotel at noon, and a big crowd of local enthusiasts was on hand to look them over, the Washington players, of course, being the chief attraction.

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—The Giants-Yanks battle switches to the American League Park this afternoon. It is quite doubtful, no matter who pitches, that such a phenomenal duel will be served as that afforded yesterday by Matty and Ford.

In the first place this afternoon's game is played to ground rules. This will interfere with the outfielders, and ordinarily easy fly balls may on this account go for extra bases.

Chase announced before the commencement of the series that he would use Warhop this afternoon regardless of how the first battle went. As Vaughn warmed up prior to the opening game the southpaw will be kept in readiness to supplant Hilly "Hops" in case the latter becomes wabbly.

Now that Russell Ford has met Christy Mathewson in a pitcher's duel, and the Giants have come out winners by a wide margin, that old question, asked since the spitball was invented, has been answered.

CALL FERRER A MARTYR TO PATRIOTISM

At a mass meeting in Faneuil Hall held in honor of Francisco Ferrer, who was executed in Spain a year ago for his alleged connection with the Barcelona riots. The death of the noted Socialist was characterized as a "judicial murder," and as "the execution of a man of high aspirations by corrupt politicians and at the instigation of a corrupt church."

The first of these characterizations came from the presiding officer, Franklin H. Wentworth, while the second occurred in the address of Edwin D. Mead. The other speakers included Frank B. Sanborn, E. H. Crouch and Clinton Zardetto.

Chairman Wentworth referred to the brave life of Ferrer as imposing an obligation upon America.

"The execution of Ferrer," he said, "was a military murder. He was tried, sentenced and executed by a body of soldiers. Here at the beginning of the twentieth century you see a man tried before a military court without being allowed to produce witnesses for himself or cross-examine the opposing witnesses. It is against such proceedings as this in any part of the world that Faneuil Hall is called upon to protest."

Edwin D. Mead said: "Ferrer was really put out of the way because he was a dangerous reformer, and the authorities found a good occasion to make way with him in the blood of the martyrs is the seed of the church. Ferrer dead is a thousand times more powerful than Ferrer living. Men who love liberty and humanity the world over will keep his memory green."

Charles Sprague said: "Ferrer died for his principles. There is no need of vindicating his beliefs or his character. The need of glorifying the deeds of his defeats to find reason to admire his courage and reverence his martyrdom."

PRIESTS FIGHT UNDER GROUND

LISBON, Oct. 14.—Battles between soldiers of the Republican provisional government and Jesuit priests, who have defied the order to leave Portugal, are being fought in subterranean passages leading from the monasteries.

The Jesuits are the only priests who have openly disobeyed the mandate of the new republic. Instead of leaving the country, they took refuge in the ancient underground passages, some of which were dug centuries ago. Soldiers have be sment after the priests, and firing was heard often today in the ancient subways. Nearly five hundred nuns from the Quelhas and Trinas convents are being escorted to the frontier, where they will be driven into Spain. Many of them are in ill health, and a few are accompanied by orphan children.

MRS. GLOVER WINS HER SUIT FOR PROPERTY

Mrs. Lillian M. Glover won her suit against her brother, Tobie Le Blanc, and to-day Judge Hitchcock in Equity Motion Session, ordered Le Blanc to reconvey to his sister the property on Main street, Waltham, where Hattie Le Blanc hid three days and nights following the murder of Mrs. Glover's husband last November.

This case was tried last week. Mrs. Glover took the witness stand and testified that the house was bought with her money and that she had it placed in the name of Tobie, her brother, for private reasons. She wanted the house reconveyed to her.

Tobie contradicted his sister on the witness stand, saying that it was his money with which the property was bought. The Court sustained Mrs. Glover's contention.

Judge Hitchcock's Decision.

In his decision Judge Hitchcock says:

"The complainant, Lillian M. Glover, purchased the premises in question as set forth in her bill of complaint, paying therefor the sum of $5,500. The money to pay for the same was drawn from a deposit in the Waltham Trust Company.

"This account was opened in the Waltham Trust Company by the complainant in 1903, in the name of the respondent, Tobie Le Blanc; all the deposits that have been made to the credit of said account have been made by the complainant at different times of her own money. No part of said account was deposited by the respondent. The money so deposited was not a gift by the complainant to the respondent, but was the property of the complainant. The complainant retained possession of the bank book, and with drawals were made by her upon orders which had been signed by Tobie R. Le Blanc in blank and were filled up by her as needed.

$500 as Part Payment.

"At the time of the agreement to purchase the property, in November, 1907, a deposit of $500 was made as part payment of the purchase price, and this money was withdrawn from the said account in the Waltham Trust Company by the complainant and the respondent, and the payment was made by the complainant. In January, 1908, the complainant went to Jamaica, and before going delivered the bank book to the said respondent, with instructions to use such portion of the deposit as might be needed for making necessary repairs to the real estate, but not to pay the balance of the purchase price.

"The respondent, however, did withdraw from said account and pay the balance of the purchasing price, namely, $5,000, during the absence of the complainant, and the deed of the premises was made, January 7, 1908, in the name of Tobie R. Le Blanc.

Took Back Her Bank Book.

"After the return of the complainant from Jamaica in the March following, the complainant took back the bank book and she ... has ever since retained the same in her possession, and has occupied and cared for the property, paid all expenses incident thereto and received the income derived therefrom, and has held and used the same for her own benefit—the said respondent claiming no interest in the property in any way until August, 1910.

"Upon all the evidence I find that the property was purchased with money of the complainant, the title being taken in the name of the respondent, but he having no interest whatever in the property.

"The complainant is entitled to a decree as prayed for.

"Decreed, that the property be declared to be held in trust by the respondent for the complainant.

"Decreed, that the respondent be ordered to execute and deliver to the complainant a good and sufficient deed of the property and to assign and transfer such insurance policies as may be necessary or incidental thereto."

GABY DESLYS COMING TO AMERICA TO WORK FOR EXILED MANUEL

French Dancer Declares She Will Remain Faithful to Boy Ex-Sovereign.

Accepts Engagements in This Country Simply to Aid Her Poor Friend.

By HUGO BETTAUER.

Special Correspondent of the American

VIENNA, Oct. 14.—When I visited Mlle. Gaby Deslys, now known world-wide as the charming French dancer, whose little slipper helped to kick young King Manuel from the throne of Portugal, I found the charming little woman in tears in her apartments at the Hotel Bristol. In her hand she held a telegram that had just been delivered to her. She smiled a greeting through the tears in her wonderful dark eyes.

"No bad news, I hope," said I, rather regretting that I should have chosen such an ill moment for a visit and interview.

"No, not bad news, for I am always glad to hear from the dear boy," she answered.

"And the dear boy?"

Manuel the Only Fellow.

"Oh, Manuel, of course. There is no other. He has just wired me from Gibraltar. Poor boy, he thinks of me constantly in the hour of his trouble, and that is enough to make me happy. So my tears may be tears of joy after all."

"And he tells of his plans?"

"No, no!" she laughed, hugging the telegram to her breast, "you are now growing inquisitive. You are not to know one word; no, not one syllable, of its contents. It is all for me—for me alone, and not one other soul in the world shall ever know the messages he sends to me. I am loyal to my King."

Gaby Deslys.

The telegram disappeared in a retreat safe from prying eyes, and the little dancer skipped with graceful steps about the room to show her happiness in its possession.

Then she became serious. The tears in her eyes had dried and they flashed anger and defiance.

"The whole world curses King Manuel now because he fled from his capital in the hour of revolution. What would they have had the poor boy do? They—the bloodthirsty and disloyal revolutionists—would have killed him if he had stayed until the end of October and he would have forfeited his life as well as his throne.

Will Go to the King.

"Life means a whole lot to a boy of his age, even though he be a king who loves his people. Life means much to me as long as my king lives, and why should it not mean much to him? If they had killed my poor boy king they would have killed me, too, for how could I live without him?

"As soon as my engagement in Vienna is over I shall go to him, wherever he is. And if he is really as poor as the papers say, I shall help him, work for him until I drop, from exhaustion. Oh, I shall show the grand world who call themselves, through loveless marriage, the wives and queens of kings.

"They say that I had to leave Lisbon, where I went as his loyal sweetheart at the command of my king, but that is not true. It is a wicked falsehood trumped up to hurt Manuel. The truth is that the people of Lisbon loved me very much and showed me every mark of respect when I appeared in public with King Manuel, as though I really was their crowned queen.

"Court Ladies Jealous."

"It was only the court ladies who hated me. And why? Because they are ugly and jealous, and I was happy and light-hearted, and my King and his people thought me beautiful. Oh, they are so terribly ugly, the court ladies of Lisbon, that I do not blame them for being jealous.

"It is also untrue that I occupied apartments in the royal palace. The King would not have had me there, and I would not have gone. I had pretty apartments at a hotel near the palace, where he could visit me whenever he wished and be happy away from the cares of State, which always surrounded him at the palace. From this hotel we arranged our excursions and picnics, which gave us the happiest days of our lives, and the people seemed happy to see us so happy together.

"How, then, can I be accused of a part in the downfall of Manuel?

"It is also untrue that the Princess Alexandrin of Fife didn't want to marry King Manuel. To the contrary he didn't want to marry her, because he loved me too well.

Will Dance in America.

"Now I shall soon be able to help him, and so much the better, because I have offers of engagements in America which will pay me enormous sums. And I shall accept them for Manuel's sake. Although we would be far happier were he not on a throne, if Manuel wishes to reascend the throne of Portugal I shall aid him in his ambitions.

"I am anxious to go to America. If my manager succeeds in buying off my contracts in Europe, I shall make my first appearance in New York in December."

Mlle. Deslys is at present fulfilling an engagement at the Apollo Theatre in Hungary, and the little theatre is packed nightly by curious throngs of men and women, many of them high personages who risk the wrath of the strict court of Franz Joseph for a glimpse of the fascinating dancer who helped to overturn a kingdom. Her manager will have to pay dearly to relieve her of her European contracts just at this time, but the offers from American managers are the largest ever made to any one to appear in vaudeville, provided the appearance can be made not later than December.

STEERAGE SMALLEST; PLAGUE PORT OMITTED

The White Star liner Canopic, which left Genoa Wednesday for Boston brings only 120 third class passengers, the smallest steerage list that ever left Italy for this port. The average number brought by the Canopic is 1,000. A partial reason for the present falling off is the fact that the Canopic did not call at Naples on this trip on account of the cholera scare.

PROMISED TO WED MAN WHO SHOT HER

PORTLAND, N. Y., Oct. 14.—Following the death here of the young woman variously known as Lillian E. Dodge or Elsie Dodge, the doctors hope to save the life of Loring L. Loomis, the New York man who sought to take his own life after fatally wounding the girl. Loomis is still unconscious in the hospital, but it is said he has a chance to recover. In an autopsy statement Miss Dodge said that she had fled from New York to escape Loomis, who wanted her to marry him. "After he shot me the first time I promised to marry him," she said, "If he would not shoot again; but he did shoot again, and then shot himself."

The Argument

When it is known that its power to strengthen the system and build up the body is why Father John's Medicine cures colds, it will be understood why it is so valuable as a tonic and for driving the impurities out of the system. It feeds the tissues and makes strength; prevents consumption—not a patent medicine; pure and wholesome—50 years in use.

MOTHERS WITH YOUNG CHILDREN

Require the nourishment contained in Father John's Medicine. Makes strength.

POINTS TO SERVICES IN ADVISORY CAPACITY IN BEHALF OF STATE'S WELFARE.

Charles S. Hamlin, in reply to George Fred Williams, today denied the latter's intimation that Hamlin is allied to corporation interests.

"Let me say," to Mr. Hamlin's answer, "that if nominated and elected to the high office of Governor I shall have but one client—the people of Massachusetts. I shall have an open mind on every public question. I shall insist with all my strength that the laws of the Commonwealth shall be obeyed both in letter and in spirit by every individual and corporation in the Commonwealth, and I shall use every endeavor to place upon the statute books the reforms to which the party as well as myself are pledged."

Plenty to Discuss.

The Hamlin reply to Williams was one of the chief topics for discussion today wherever politicians gathered. Uncertainty as to how a special delivery letter containing a statement of such importance and as to how the Ballot Law Commission will decide on the right of the committee of Four to nominate Officers B. Grant for Lieutenant-governor and rumors of activity on the part of Ward 8 men in mailing the special delivery envelopes, intended to be delivered during the Mechanics' Crowder and those of the nominating committee will be the situation to the verdict of the campaign. Ward 8 is the largest ward in the state and the politicians were willing to talk about today.

Mr. Williams's reply to Mr. Hamlin's refusal to withdraw further, let us say:

"I was made acquainted with your letter over the telephone today after reaching Mattapoisett. I have dictated this reply in the same manner without the advantage of having your letter before me to answer to your first inquiry, I will say that for many years I have been employed or retained professionally by the Boston & Maine railroad, which, as you know, is doing splendid work building up the industrial interests of New England. My employment by the railroads was known to the officers of the Chamber of Commerce, but was not considered by them in any way inconsistent with my employment by them for the questions upon which I have acted were always either at the direct interest of the railroad or the common interest of the people of Boston and New England.

Served on Commissions.

"In the interest of the export trade of Boston, I was sent abroad in 1903 in an effort to secure a repeal of the embargo being American cattle during the foot and mouth epidemic. I am at present engaged in appearing for the port of Boston in the import differential controversy, which is of vital interest to the industrial welfare of the city and State. Further, let me say that I appeared for the United States Government under commission of the company that is now carrying out I have served the State of Massachusetts and the city of Boston on various other commissions.

"I am inclined to feel that the most important labor which I have undertaken has been where I have served in formal arbitration hearings for which I had been agreed upon by the laboring men of the State to serve as chairman in disputes which they have had with their employers. The marks of favor and confidence are my pleasure to recognize this compliment, I hope, by serving without compensation, finding my return in the fact that, as a result in part of my efforts, wages of nearly 5,000 men in this State have been increased.

"As to certain other of your questions let me say I have never ref. to the best of my recollection, appeared before any railroad on a purely State matter, nor have I ever appeared before any Legislature or legislative committee of any railroad. Your friends may also be informed that information that I have now in my office against the New Haven road, and that I am pressing to the best of my ability.

"I have appeared only before the Legislature on any corporation matter, but railroads, and that was some years ago, for the Chamber of Commerce. I also appeared on various public questions.

"I am endeavoring to construe your letter as a genuine inquiry for information, and will therefore proceed to answer the things which you imply, even though you do not say them outright.

"I can assure you I have never been enlisted as to any merger legislation, but I am opposed to the policy of the creation of a holding company to be savings bank investments would result from the recommendation or signature, if I was Governor. As to any other matter upon any railroad work has been concerned, I would consent to refer you to the speech with which James R. Carroll nominated me in the convention, in which you will find many of the facts set forth.

SHALL HAVE BUT ONE CLIENT— THE PEOPLE, SAYS C. S. HAMLIN

Let me say that if nominated and elected to the high office of Governor I shall have but one client—the people of Massachusetts. I shall have an open mind on every public question. GOVERNOR IS 'MENDACIOUS' SAYS MAYOR

Mayor Fitzgerald charges Governor Draper with being "mendacious" and "careless with the truth." The Mayor made the charge in a formal statement and followed up with an oral charge at the Robert Emmet Association banquet at Jamaica Plain. The Governor and Mayor met at the Jamaica Plain banquet. The Governor hobnobbed by the Mayor's chair after he had finished his own speech and was on his way out of the hall. The meeting was as icy as it was brief.

The Mayor's attack on Governor Draper was prompted by the latter's speech before the Norfolk Club Wednesday night, when he said that the present Fitzgerald administration is the worst we ever had and is still getting bad."

At the Robert Emmet Association banquet the Mayor said:

"Any citizen of the Commonwealth, whether he be a Governor or not, even though he be speaking in a partisan spirit, ought at least to tell the truth. The true Governor ceases to be partisan."

In his written statement the Mayor said:

"I should like to ask Governor Draper a few questions. I do not expect him to answer them frankly. I ask Governor Draper if he dares to say:

"First—If in case such an investigation of the State's affairs was made by a state finance commission as was made by Boston's affairs by a Boston finance commission, not a man could be found who would say that he was ever asked to contribute a dollar for a favor at the State House.

"Second—If no name could be found upon the pay rolls of the State which did not belong there?

"Third—If no evidence could be produced of cruelty toward its inmates by those in control of the State charitable institutions?

"Fourth—If a careful investigation of the savings banks of the State were instituted by an honest and impartial savings bank commission, that the thieving and the laxity of management which came to light accidentally at Somerville would not be found in other savings institutions which are intrusted with the deposits of the wage earning class?

"Fifth—That the following charge, made in a recent speech by a member of his own party, Speaker Joseph H. Walker, is without foundation:

"The Commonwealth is running into debt. Every year she borrows more money than she pays off and more money than she has to borrow. This is done for the sole purpose of keeping down the tax rate. This broad dealing fairly and openly with the taxpayers. This practice should be stopped. It is thoroughly unsound. The net debt is growing at the rate of a $1,000,000 a year.

LEAGUE CHIEFS TO STUMP STATE

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—Owing to an insistent demand from the supporters of the Independence League in Kings County, the managers of the State campaign yesterday decided to make the joint notification and ratification of the State ticket of the League placed on Democratic tickets a double meeting to be held in Manhattan and Brooklyn next Monday night.

The managers of the campaign have arranged for a big ratification meeting to be held in Clermont Park in Brooklyn. Because of the demand from all sections of Brooklyn, the League obtained the largest hall available. The club will accommodate 10,000 persons and indications last night were that it would be packed to overflowing.

John J. Hopper, the nominee for Governor, and William Randolph Hearst, nominee for Lieutenant-Governor, will stump the State.

MISS HUBBARD NAMES BOAT.

Miss Elinor Hibbard, daughter of the late ex-Mayor George Hibbard, will christen the new lifeboats department boat named in honor of her father, when the craft leaves the ways from Lawton's yard to South Boston next Monday morning at 10 o'clock.

LABOR SCORES DRAPER AND IS FOR SUFFRAGE

Organized labor of Massachusetts has officially condemned Governor Draper, and directed union men to use every effort to bring about his defeat. This action was taken at the close of the convention of the State branch, American Federation of Labor, here. At the same session the federation went on record in favor of votes for women.

The condemnation of the Draper administration was recommended by the political activity committee which consists of representatives of each central labor union of the State and the State executive board.

Resolutions offered by delegates requesting all trade unionists to do everything in their power to defeat any candidate for the House of Representatives or Senate who has pledged or agreed to vote for "the arch enemy of organized labor, Senator Henry Cabot Lodge," and also in opposition to Congressman Gillett were referred to the committee.

The workingmen's compensation bill having been referred to a special State committee, that matter was referred to the executive board, so that no act on action is necessary on time will be lost. The executive board reindorsed and pledged support of the homestead bill.

The convention conducted its election of officers by reelecting Frank M. Bump of Brockton as a vice president, completing the reelection of every member of this year's board.

Thomas J. Reagan of the Lowell textile workers was reelected a member of the State executive board and William E. Sproules of the Lowell Street Carmen's Union was also elected to the board, the only new man elected to any of the regular offices of the union.

The official announcement of the strat ballot on Wednesday was made at the opening of today's session, showing that President Thomas J. Durnin of Holyoke, Secretary-Treasurer B. D. Driscoll of Boston, Vice-President James W. Wall of Worcester, Michael D. Cotter of Cambridge, James R. Meagle of Lawrence and John W. Powers of Fall River and Chairman John Wester Sherman and Henry Sterling of Boston and Secretary John J. Griffin of Lynn of the legislative committee had been reelected.

CORNER OF BEACH STREET

We are doing a bigger business this year than ever before, because our methods enable us to sell the same goods at less prices than our competitors. Being just below Boylston Street, we escape the high rents of the fashionable shopping district. A store of our size would rent for $50,000 to $100,000 in the high rent district. Our rent is scarcely 10 per cent. of that enormous amount. Think what this means to you. We can save you 40 per cent. on clothing.

Other things combine to help us offer nothing but bargains at 662 to 672 Washington Street.

Here is to-day's special Harrison List. Bring it with you to-day or to-morrow for your convenience.

Big Four Waits.

There will be no more meetings of the Democratic Nominating Committee of Four until Monday forenoon unless the State Ballot Law Commission should decide today that the committee's nomination of Clifton B. Loring for Lieutenant-Governor was illegal.

Chairman Macleod has asked the members to hold themselves in readiness to meet this forenoon in case the decision of the ballot law commission is against the committee's nomination.

In this event it would be necessary for the committee to agree on a candidate and secure nomination papers for the one containing 1,000 names of registered voters of the Commonwealth.

Robert I. Crowley, one of the members of the committee, announced today that if the ballot law commissioner's decision is adverse to the committee his choice for Lieutenant-governor will be former Governor Thomas J. Cassidy of Attania, who nominated Vahey for governor, in the convention in one of the most eloquent speeches heard in a Democratic convention in years, and who was badly injured while returning to his home in an automobile last Saturday.

The Hamlin men have learned that the special delivery canvass letters to the delegates to the Parental Irish convention all bore a number on the flap of the envelope and immediately charged that the State committee had "keyed" the delegates, that is, each delegate is numbered and the number on the flap of the return envelope corresponds with the number beside his name on the list of delegates in the possession of chairman Macleod of the St te committee.

In this way the Hamlin men said, it would be an easy matter for the State committee officials to keep track of those who had not replied by checking off the number on the list at headquarters as the return envelopes came into the State Committee rooms addressed to William F. Hayes, secretary of the nominating committee.

As a result of their conference it was agreed that the best way would be to have the letters addressed to Hayes as secretary of the nominating committee held up at the Boston post office until Monday at 10 a. m., when Mr. Hayes and Executive Secretary Loring of the State Committee will call for the replies.

Mr. Hayes and Mr. Loring together called on Postmaster Mansfield and made the arrangement on him that he hold such mail as is directed. The postmaster said he would and gave the necessary instructions to his subordinates.

Mr. Hayes proposes to open these letters in the presence of the political reporters Monday morning.

Mansfield Will Withdraw.

Just what influence the result of this canvass of the delegates will have on Secretary Hayes, who is a Hamlin supporter, is not known at this time, but there is a lot of guessing that he will not pay much attention to it.

His colleague on the nominating committee, Mayor Crowley, states that he will have no more influence on him than if it were taken by the Republican State Committee.

Macleod and Maynard are quoted as saying that they will abide by the result of the canvass.

Frederick W. Mansfield, the "provisional" candidate for Governor, is quoted as saying that such a vote will not influence him at all.

Secretary Hayes told his associates on the committee that he had had talk with

MUTT 'N JEFF MEET AT TUFTS LIKE KNIGHTS

Mutt and Jeff, impersonated by Tufts students, jousted for fifteen minutes at Tufts College to-day in a tournament that was heralded about he campus as a struggle to the death. At the conclusion of the tournament the result was declared a draw, each combatant having been hurled from his chariot six times.

The tournament took place in a roped arena constructed on the campus in front of the college chapel. Mutt, impersonated by William J. Bennett, was the first of the combatants to appear. He reached the arena at 11:15, in a wheelbarrow chariot drawn by Virgil A. Rice and Russell L. Davidson. Mutt wore red and black plaid trousers and a plaid coat. His chariot circled the arena once amid great cheering from two hundred students of both Tufts and Jackson.

Jeff entered into the arena before Mutt had taken his position on one side of the roped arena. Jeff was Michael J. Mastrangelo and his chariot was drawn by Frank A. Towsley and Roger F. Robbins. Jeff wore a black and white plaid suit with his tall silk hat. Another outburst of applause greeted his circling of the arena.

At 11:37 the two rivals faced each other on opposite side of the enclosure. At a signal from the herald, the two dashed against each other, each with a huge wooden padding spear safely padded. They came together in the center of the arena. Both were hurled from their barrows to the ground. This was repeated six times until the recitation bell ended the tournament. What was to have been a battle to the death was declared a draw.

SEEK MAN WHO SENT CHILD TO HOME IN BAG

The police are searching for a well-dressed man who sent a twenty-four-hour-old male child to the Children's Home at No. 57 Blossom street in a basketwork suitcase by a Western Union messenger boy.

Pasquale Mide, the messenger, was walking to the North station when he was approached by the stranger who carried the dress suitcase. The messenger was asked to take the bag to the Children's Home.

The man was about thirty-five years old, five feet ten inches in height, and well dressed. He asked the boy to deliver the bag to whoever answered the bell. He asked the fee and on being told fifteen cents gave Pasquale $1 and told him to keep the change.

The man walked a short way with the boy, then left him, and Mide delivered the case to a maid at the home. The lad remarked that one end of the case was held open to admit air. The maid took the case to the matron, who opened it and found the baby inside. The child's clothing was of the finest texture. She notified the police and at once an investigation was started. At about the same time a boy had been called to Young's Hotel and there received a boy which was consigned to the Children's Hospital.

The call was confounded with the abandonment case for some time, but Sergeant Horton of the City Hall avenue station managed to trace it down and finally land the baby inside. The child was transferred to the Chardon street home.

MISSIONARY SAYS AMERICANS HAVE SWELLED HEADS

Columbus shouldn't have discovered this country. He should have found something nearer. You are too far away from the seat of things. Self-satisfaction is America's evil. You sit back complacently and say to yourselves that you are it, that you are ex-officio omnipotent. You haven't seen anything, but you know it all, or think you do. You just pick up and from these pickings form your opinions.—Rev. Dr. Arthur Smith, in missionary address before City Club.

The wedding, a surprise to the friends of the couple, took place at the home of the Rev. L. H. Bugbee, pastor of the Brookline Methodist Episcopal Church. The bride was graduated from Brookline High School last June and the bridegroom is a Harvard student.

BOARD BEGINS LONG PROBE OF CUSTOM HOUSE

Every detail of the administration of the customs service at the port of Boston is being minutely investigated by the commission of special agents of the Treasury Department, which has begun its examination of the Custom House.

Boarding regulations, examination of baggage and freight imports, salaries and a dozen other matters touching on the efficiency of the service will come under the close scrutiny of the experts of the commission.

Judge Burton Parker is chairman of the investigating board, and has as assistants Special Treasury Agents Leslie Colton, C. C. Hall and Curt H. Chandler. Their task is expected to occupy seven full working day for a period of about two months.

No preliminary reports of their findings or recommendations will be made public until the task is completed and the report filed with the Secretary of the Treasury. It has been customary to conduct similar investigations at all the more important ports of the country every three or four years.

The local customs inspectors and other employes, while maintaining an attitude of cordiality and respect for possible suggestions as to improved efficiency in their methods, are also keenly interested in the possibility of salary increases. There are about 200 inspectors, messengers and clerks connected with the branch of Uncle Sam's paternal activities. Of late the city inspectors have been especially active in lobbying Congress for an increase in their compensation.

Two years ago Congress authorized Secretary Dawes of the Treasury Department to increase the salaries of these men at this port from $4 to $5 per day whenever, in his discretion the circumstances warranted such action. The Secretary failed to act upon the authorization, stating in his letter to the local customs officials that the finances of the department would not permit him to do so.

NEW ARREST COMING IN THE BROOKS CASE, SAYS FEDERAL AGENT

Following the arrest of Charles H. Brooks, manager of the Redeemable Investment Company, which occupies the entire sixth floor at No. 85 Devonshire street, and is capitalized at $10,000,000, Post Office Inspector Clarahan, who has charge of the case, said today that another arrest was expected in the case.

"Whom do you expect to arrest?" he was asked.

"I do not care to say," he replied, "but there will probably be one arrest more in the case."

Indorsed by Ballinger.

Mr. Brooks Staid Away.

The suspicious offices of the concern were in charge of a boy, who refused to give his name and Miss Marie C. Macdonald, the stenographer, whom a reporter called to[day]. The latter was in an unhappy mood and characterized stories printed in the morning newspapers about the company as a tissue of lies. Mr. Brooks, who was liberated in $5000 bail, was not present.

Norman Plass, minister, ex-president of Washburn College, Topeka, Kansas, and up to two months ago president of the company, is absent from his home at No. 169 Park street, Newton. He was in Chicago yesterday, and is said to be on his way to Vancouver, British Columbia. Mrs. Beatty and has caused a panic among the host of investors who had dealings with the company.

During the past seven months the firm has been doing a big investment business at the luxurious offices on the sixth floor of the Lawrence Building at No. 85 Devonshire street. Many of the dealings were with women and professional men.

Secretary of the Interior Richard A. Ballinger, the late Justice of the United States Supreme Court, David J. Brewer, Senator Charles Curtis of Kansas, ex-Comptroller of Currency W. R. Dawes and C. S. Gleed of Hale & Gleed, Topeka, Kan., were included, it is said, in the list of the company's indorsers.

The arrest of Brooks came as a great surprise to business men throughout the country, and is said to be on his way to Vancouver, British Columbia. Mrs.

United States District Attorney French has been besieged with queries from anxious investors in regard to the dealings of the company, but he declares that nothing can be given out until after the investigation has been completed. Most of those who invested with the company are residents of this city or New England, and the amount of their investments, it is said, will reach several hundred thousand dollars. Everything likely to prove valuable as evidence was seized by the Federal officer who raided the offices of the company following the arrest of Brooks and the books, records, letters, pamphlets, indexes, etc., used in the company's transactions are now in the possession of the Government.

Calls Firm Solvent.

Attorney John P. Feeney, who has been retained as counsel for Manager Brooks, to-day said: "The Redeemable Investment Company is solvent. Manager Brooks is absolutely on the level. All the stockholders are satisfied. They can come back and get money and six per cent. interest at any time to-day if they want it.

"The company has mighty good assets. This complaint which the federal officers have worked on was made by a discharged employe, who acted wholly out of spite. He was kicked out of the office some months ago.

At No. 667 Columbia road, Miss Marie C. Macdonald, the stenographer of the concern, was found to-day. She is a pretty girl of about twenty-three and a graduate of a Cambridge high school.

"I went to work for the Redeemable Investment Company about a year ago," said the young woman. "I was the stenographer of the firm. My duties were merely routine and I know nothing about the inside facts of the company."

MISSING PRESIDENT OF REDEEMABLE INVESTMENT CO.

NORMAN PLASS

SAYS BEARS ARE EASIER TO TRAIN THAN HUSBANDS

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—Every husband is a bear some of the time and some husbands are bears all of the time. This is one of the things that every married woman knows—none better than Mrs. Millie Spellman, who presides over a family of eighteen bears in the Hippodrome circus and who after years devoted to letting her fellow-creatures that bears are much easier to train than husbands. Moreover, that they "play faithful" with a permanency of good behavior that the human beast has never been known to approach.

"Why, of course, bears are easier to train than husbands," said Mrs. Spellman. The handsome trainer who has brought up a husband as well as eighteen bears in the way he should go is the smoothest, the vivid red ruffles of her stage costume, in the dressing room of the Hippodrome stage.

"It takes three years to train a bear, and a lifetime to train a husband. And other things. The bear never goes back on his training, and I doubt if you can say as much of any man alive.

String for Husbands.

"Perhaps you don't know that I have the only loose bears' act in the United States. I mean the only act in which the bears are absolutely free on the stage. Generally there is a string attached to each bear that the trainer can step on at any time.

"I've often thought that is a good idea with a husband—a long string, you know, so as to let him think he's free to go anywhere he pleases, but that his trainer can step on in half a second if he begins to cut up. There's only one bad bear in the entire lot. I call him Midnight. He gave me that nip a few weeks ago." Mrs. Spellman showed a half-healed wound that nearly circled her right thumb.

"Nearly took the thumb off, you see," she said, carelessly. "What did he do it for? Oh, fussing about his food just like a man bear. You know, in my circus act the bears all drink condensed milk out of bottles. There's a cork in each bottle with a triangular slit in it, so that the milk will come through slowly. Well, Midnight had a new bottle that for some reason wouldn't work. When the other bears were all through and I told them to go to their chairs, Midnight held up his full bottle of milk to show me that he hadn't had any.

Bears Like Husbands.

"I ordered him to his seat anyway, and he started for it. Then he seemed to think better of it, ran back and nipped me on the hand. He's awfully sorry now. He cries if I talk to him about it, and whenever that thumb's uncovered he tries to lick it. I tell you a bad bear is awfully cute when he's repentant. But, then, he's a husband, too.

"There's one very general idea about bears—and I think about husbands—that's altogether wrong," Mrs. Spellman continued, "that is that they train better when they are caught very young. They don't. A baby bear is very easily spoiled by petting, and they are so cute you're apt to spoil them.

"It's the same way with very young husbands. They get used to a lot of petting and coddling, and after a while they won't train worth a cent. You know, with bears and men an occasional lump of sugar is all right, but when they get so they want the whole sugar bowl they are ruined.

"You get the best training results from bears that are three to five years old."

"And husbands from thirty to thirty-five, but of course I'm not such an expert with men as I am with bears. I've trained eighteen bears and only one man." Mrs. Spellman laughed suddenly.

CENTRAL IDEA AGAIN ARGUED BY CHURCHMEN

The struggles for centralization in the Congregational church was continued to-day at a conference between the committee of twenty-five and delegates to the annual council of the church held in Ford Hall. To-day's conference on the question is the last, and the committee's report will be made to the full council to-morrow.

To-day's debate on the question was even warmer than yesterday and representatives of the press were again excluded. Nevertheless, the subject was freely discussed by the delegates in the corridors of Tremont Temple, where the headquarters of the delegates are located. From the general tone of the remarks gathered here, it is expected that the committee will recommend centralization to the general council.

Simultaneously with the Ford Hall meeting another was held under the general council by the American Board of Missions in Tremont Temple. Missionaries from India, Mexico, Austria and China addressed the gathering and told of the pressing needs of their respective work. President Samuel B. Capen introduced the speakers. David C. Churchill, a missionary from India, declared that higher education was needed in that country. "Education can never be too high in India," said he, "for there is a variety of people and the differences between low and high caste is troubling us. We have to carry on industrial education for this reason. Our aim is to teach these people to help themselves."

Dr. L. H. Beals, from the same country, pleaded for the looking after the bodies of people as well as their souls. "Missionaries in India have to be practicing physicians," decladed he. "We have to work under the poorest conditions. Surgical operations have to be performed on bare earthen floors. There are no such things as hospitals."

Rev. Edward Fairbanks, Rev. Dustin E. Abbott, Rev. Robert A. Hume, Rev. James C. Perkins and Rev. A. P. Jones followed and endorsed the statements made by the previous speakers.

Rev. James C. Eaton of Mexico spoke of the church there, and the pride they all felt to have Ex-Governor Guild as a speaker at the Centennial.

Missionaries from Austria addressed the meeting, and the Rev. John S. Porter told of the churches of missionaries in that country who came here to preach the gospel. Rev. Arthur H. Smith, for forty years a missionary in China, told of the progress of the work in that country. He pleaded for centralization in the church as its only salvation in this country.

At the conclusion of the meeting a report was read showing that the board had sent out forty-eight new missionaries this year, and eleven of those were present to-day. They will leave to-morrow for their respective fields.

PARIS LOSES ITS CROWN AS FASHION QUEEN

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—Paris may as well be wiped off the map. The United Ladies' Tailors' Association has wrenched the crown from the sovereign city of France. That we should live to see the day, Helas! Surely we may be pardoned if we are torn between triumphant patriotism and the vanquished beliefs of our childhood.

For were we not taught—as soon as we were old enough to be taught anything—that all styles, all fashion and all chic must and did emanate from Paris, the sartorially incomparable? How stupid to believe any country could do anything as well as can America! We might have known. But we never guessed till yesterday. It took the entire Ladies' Tailors' Association's exhibition of Fall models, given in the Belvedere Roof Garden of the Hotel Astor, to convince us that Paris, as a fashion centre, was no more.

"Let us all sing 'The Star-Spangled Banner,'" proposed Alexander M. Green, president of the association, as he opened the exhibition, and we sang it lustily.

Then, slowly at first, but at last in twos and threes—much as pickles come from the jar—thirty-five lovely ladies strolled from the dressing room, each clothed in a masterpiece of the American tailors' art. But—more of this anon.

4 TONS (8000 lbs.) of RIKER SPECIAL CHOCOLATES

Will be sold tomorrow (Saturday) in our 13 stores in Boston, Lawrence, Lowell, Salem and Brockton.

A year ago this feat would have been impossible, but we feel sure we will do it tomorrow.

Riker's Special is the excellent mixture which we claim is not excelled by any other regularly sold at 40c, and is sold Saturday only at the special price of 29c.

Without a bit of advertising, other than the word of mouth expressions from pleased customers, our sales every succeeding Saturday have grown with leaps and bounds.

Because of the unusual quantity, we began to pack this 8000 pounds of candy yesterday; but ordinarily it comes to you just 2 days old—made on Thursday, packed on Friday and sold on Saturday.

Come in to any of our stores and see it disappear.

You'll agree with us that we will accomplish this remarkable feat.

Don't form any conclusion about the quality from the price. We admit it ought to sell for more money, but we take this method of advertising our candy department. You could pay half as much more and not get a mixture so pure, wholesome and delicious.

Here's the offer—Buy a pound Saturday at 29c, take it home, and if you don't agree with us that you never bought a better candy at 40c, bring it back and get your money. It is sold with the "Riker-Jaynes Guarantee of Satisfaction," and you know that is dependable.

DEPORTATION OR STATE CARE FOR THE PAVLUCHEKS

With the prisoner himself abstaining from food in Charles street jail in order to give it to his wife and children, and with the Chelsea Overseers at the Poor at the end of their official resources, the continued support of the family of Theophile Pavlucheck, the Russian postal employe held to await the decision of the Federal authorities as to his extradition to answer a charge of larceny, becomes a problem.

The family is still at the Chelsea Home for the Poor, subsisting on only $3 a week. The overseers say they have done all they can with authority.

If the man goes back to Russia, the family will probably go with him; but, if he remains and the family is in need of further assistance, it will probably be given by the State at Tewksbury, as the State can do nothing outside of the State institution. Several persons have made inquiries concerning the family.

It is learned that the aid given by the Overseers of the Poor, was given on Wednesday, and that the mother had previously visited the office on the following day and had asked for more assistance.

BALLINGER JARRED IN TRAIN CRASH

CINCINNATI, O., Oct. 14.—Secretary of the Interior Ballinger was severely shaken in a wreck on the Baltimore and Ohio Southern railroad in the outskirts of Cincinnati. Ten passengers were hurt, none fatally. Secretary Ballinger left later for Washington.

JOAN VICTORY COST TALENT BIG FORTUNE

The sum of $20,000 was the jackpot turned up on the trotter Hallworthy (2:05¼) when he went down to defeat at the hands of Joan (2:05¾) in the classic Transylvania at Lexington.

More wise money of the talent was sent to the inclosure in this race than in any contest known upon the light harness turf this year.

A deluge of rain made it necessary to hold back the scoring of the Transylvania for four days, and in the interval the wisest of the country's talent went to Hallworthy as if his cause was that of a long-lost brother.

In all there appears to have been about $60,000 in the cashier's cages when the trotters turned for the word in the classic Transylvania, and the boys from Cleveland, the home of Joan, the winner, reaped a swell harvest.

Incident to the great victory of Joan, it is an interesting fact that Mike McDevitt, the driver of the winner, is the first reinman to win the Kentucky Futurity, in which he drove Grace, and the Transylvania stake at the same meeting.

DORCHESTER CHILD WHO WON PRIZE FOR BEAUTY IN MAINE

ELEANOR FETHERSTON

Eleanor Fetherston, aged two.

The "most beautiful woman in the world" in embryo is little Eleanor Fetherston, the two-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Fetherston of Rice Hill avenue, Dorchester, in the opinion of her parents and admiring friends. In spite of her short existence, she already has a fame and reputation for beauty that thousands of young girls would give much to possess and her charms have been heralded not only in the vicinity but in the Maine vacation resorts as well.

Admiring friends declare that the winsome Eleanor is worthy of the title of the "most beautiful child in America." In spite of the claims made by the admirers of little Millicent Cowen of Everett, the original claimant.

That her beauty is equal to any is proved by the fact that the little Dorchester girl won first prize, $1, a large contest in the Summer colony in Kennebunkport this Summer. There were 200 contestants but the judges did not hesitate to award the prize to baby Eleanor.

A New York millionaire was so captivated by her beauty that on his return to New York he sent Eleanor a handsome wicker go carriage wherever she goes out.

2 BOMB PLOTS DISCOVERED IN PARIS STRIKE

PARIS, Oct. 14.—A second anarchistic plot was revealed today by the discovery of another bomb in Avenue Kleber, similar to that which was exploded before the building at No. 6 Rue de Berrie early in the day.

The discovery of the second infernal machine by the police probably prevented the loss of many lives. The police and detectives immediately redoubled their efforts to learn the identity of the placers of the bombs and to find if others had been hidden.

It was feared that the authors of the early outrage had placed infernal machines in many sections of the city. The precautionary measures taken to guard the lives of the public officials, especially President Fallieres and Premier Briand, have been strongly increased.

The first bomb was fired at 12:30 a. m. The noise aroused the surrounding district, which is one of the most fashionable in Paris. The glass doors of the house were damaged, the inner doors shattered and the windows blown to pieces. The houses on each side and in front also suffered. Nobody was injured.

The reason this particular house was attacked is unknown. Judge Dreyfus is one of the occupants of the house, and ex-Chief Detective Goron lives next door.

The labor leaders do not countenance the new dynamite, and it is believed that they have no part in any anarchistic plans.

That the Government is doubtful of its own claims that the strike is practically broken was made apparent by the continued massing of troops at strategic points.

The situation showed improvement today except upon the Southern Railroad, where the strike was scheduled to begin at once. The Confederation of Union Trades announced that it would call out all the employes of the building trades, of the municipal subway, the tramways and the omnibus system. Complete compliance with this order, they declared, would tie up the whole city.

Stern precautions were taken not only in this city, but throughout France. A dragnet was set for the capture of anarchists and radicals who took advantage of the present labor situation to cloak their real attack against law and order. The military guard around the official residence of President Fallieres was doubled today.

Soldiers with fixed bayonets marched up and down in front of the Elysee, and persons of suspicious appearance were not allowed to linger in the street.

Secret police agents of the government mingled with the known leaders of the anarchistic propaganda to learn their plans. Measures were taken at the ports of entry to guard against the influx of anarchists from other countries.

During the anti-anarchist crusade Premier Briand is being closely guarded. He is credited with the successful inroads made in the strikers' ranks.

Paris was partially in darkness last night and a great deal of disorder was reported to the police through the early hours of today. The loafers, taking advantage of the unlighted condition of the city due to the electricians' strike, held sway in certain portions, destroying property and attacking pedestrians.

ESTHER QUINN TELLS HOW DR. PECK WOOED AND THEN JILTED HER

"Dr. Peck was an ardent suitor. He stormed my heart, and I couldn't resist him.

"Only a short time after we met I realized my feeling for him was more than friendship.

"When I heard he was married I thought my heart would stop beating.

"I never loved anybody else. I don't suppose I ever will.

"Oh, how that man could make love! He overwhelmed me with his endearments and vows.

"I might have suffered in silence had he not attacked my character, then I realized it was my duty to defend myself."—From Esther Quinn's own statement.

By ESTHER QUINN.

NEW YORK, Oct. 14. I don't believe any woman in the world suffers more than when she comes to realize that she has been the fool she has proved herself since they left me. She has trusted implicitly her very life and soul. The brutality of the thing is of such enormity that at times a woman cannot conceive it. The mind reels, the brain, and then gradually the full import of what it all means dawns upon you.

The whole experience is dreary waste; you feel alone and there is no friendly hand to reach out to. The future has been wiped out for you, and there is nothing left but memories. And such bitter memories.

I am speaking from the standpoint of a woman who has always led a life of purity of mind, and who can hold her head up in the world. I have always been a good woman.

It is hard for me to go back over the years and tell about Harry S. Peck. It is a period of my life that I am in no instant about recalling, as I realize that it is all past and dead, and there is, however, its portion of happiness for me, nine years in which I found in Harry S. Peck my friend.

I scarcely remember our first meeting. In fact, after I got to know him he seemed as if we had known each other always, and I could not recall the time when we had been strangers.

My first impression of him was that he was extremely sympathetic. His mind seemed to be flooded with beautiful thoughts. Then the wonderful magnetic power attracted me, and I saw that he was an unusual man.

It was only a short time after we met that I realized my feeling for him was more than friendly. I met him while I was employed upon a newspaper published in this city. Professor Peck was writing some articles under the name of Rufford Page. He dictated to me while I wrote upon the typewriter, and I was impressed with the eloquence and command of the English language.

You see, that even though this man was treating me silently and inhumanly, I am willing to give him credit for good. The pity of it is that he is not as good and noble and true as I thought he was. I have never been satisfied to my conscience that I did the right thing in January by going to Boston with Professor Peck, and was forced temporarily to give up my position to get away from him. When I returned in February my first impulse was to go to him and ask him why he had happened to cause the breach between us, but my self-respect would not allow me to do so.

Talked of a Divorce.

He told me he was getting a divorce from his wife, due to incompatibility of temperament, and that he was not happy with her. He asked me to wait for him, and I could not resist the appeal. He said he would not return the next day, but he would explain everything. I went home that night and thought it all over. Every one of my friends advised me to have nothing to do with Peck. Everything appeared to me in a very different light, but I knew nothing of Peck's past life, never had met his wife, and was fond of him. I decided to wait for him.

I was thinking of this when Peck came to see me. He told me that he would get a divorce from his wife and then marry me. He said that if I had known he had a wife he never would have spoken to me. He asked me to get myself in his place. He was a stranger in this city, and I was the only woman who took any interest in him. He seemed to be a weakest point with me, and I succumbed absolutely.

It was for several years as the world knew me then. Harry would take me to little dinners in delightful places. We would sit and listen to music and talk about his work. He was very much interested in the writing I was doing, and he encouraged me in it. He told me that it never died out.

He told me how that man could make love to me. He overwhelmed me with his endearments and vows. He worshipped me, and I was the happiest woman alive.

Then he went away. He always would bring letters, which as every woman knows, are preserved. These are the most priceless things I possessed and read and reread them over and over again.

Then he came back and he asked me plainly to marry him. Up to that time he had never proposed to me. I suppose he believed him for his silence, considering that he was a part of a gentleman, as he was married.

Trusted Him Implicitly.

I now admitted how far coming to me directly after the decree of divorce had been granted. I trusted him implicitly, and was. They are not exclusive, neither do they act powerfully on any organ, but they cure indigestion on the common sense plan of digesting the food eaten thoroughly before it has time to ferment, sour and cause the mischief. This is the only secret of their success.

Cathartic pills never have and never can cure indigestion and stomach troubles, because they act entirely on the bowels, where as the whole trouble is really in the stomach.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets taken after meals digest the food. That is all there is to it. Food not digested or half digested is poison, as it creates gas, acidity, headaches, palpitation of the heart, loss of flesh and appetite and many other troubles which are often called by some other name.

They are sold by druggists everywhere at 50 cents per package.

Breaks News of Marriage.

When I went to the office I found Peck had preceded me. He asked me to go out to lunch with him. I refused, but he insisted, saying he would explain everything. I went home that night and thought it all over. Every one of my friends advised me to have nothing to do with Peck. I decided I would be all right in the morning.

The next day he was the his old self, charming and with easy flowing words. His gradual stages he led up to his second marriage, of which I was in ignorance, and finally told me of it.

I was dumbfounded. I stood at him like some dumb, inanimate creature, not fully realizing at first the import of his words. Then, womanlike, I found solace in tears. I left the office and went home.

His answer was that he did not know. He had acted on impulse, he said, but he would marry me. He was always methodical in everything he did. He told me that he loved his wife and some children, but in the light of his honor he considered himself free to marry me. He said he never loved me as he loved me as he loved me. And again I believed him.

My dilemma showed me a lesson to other women not to waste the best years of their life trusting men. I am happy that I have learned this lesson, although it has cost me the sake of financial aid for children. I have told nothing but the truth, and that always will be the end.

I have never loved anybody but Harry. I don't suppose I ever will.

PATROLMAN SAVES WOMAN IN FLAMES

Patrolman Timothy Carroll broke through a heavy door and rescued Miss Lilla Charmers, sixty-two years of age, from burning to death in her home at No. 126 Shawmut avenue, Miss Charmers, who is lame, stopped from her bed to the floor and upset a small parlor stove, the coals from which ignited her clothing. A small sum of the reflection of the blaze on the window and rushed to the woman's assistance. Miss Charmers was taken to the City Hospital, where she is not expected to survive her burns.

ESTHER QUINN, WHO IS SUING DR. PECK FOR HEART BALM

PECK MENACED, HE SAYS, BY WIFE OF PROFESSOR

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—Accompanied by his attorney, Professor Harry Thurston Peck, formerly professor of Latin at Columbia University and defendant in the $50,000 breach of promise suit brought by Miss Esther Quinn, appeared yesterday at the District Attorney's office. Both held a long conference with one of Mr. Whitman's assistants.

After their visit it was learned that they asked to be allowed to prefer charges against the wife of a Cornell University professor. From Assistant District Attorney Endicott it was learned that Professor Peck asked that his case be presented before one of the four Grand Juries which is now in session.

Assistant District Attorney Embree said that Professor Peck's allegations dealt with threatening letters which he asserted had been written to him by the professor's wife about two years ago. Both Mr. Embree and District Attorney Whitman discussed the case between themselves and refused to take any action because the statute of limitations covering the case extend to-day.

Both Mr. Embree and his assistant briefly left the Criminal Courts Building and refused to be interviewed. Later it was learned that Professor Peck intended that he would appear before some court magistrate to-day, but was withdrawn out the entire matter. During the absence of Professor Peck and his wife no mention as to the identity of the woman was given.

According to intimations of Mr. Francis, before he left the Criminal Courts Building the threatening letters are in no way connected with Miss Quinn's suit. Mr. Francis was a member of the Columbia trustees in dismissing Professor Cattell.

Mr. Francis was found last evening at the Yale Club, No. 30 West Forty-fourth street, by an American reporter, and questioned about his visit to Mr. Whitman's office.

"I am very sorry that my visit to the District Attorney's office has become known," he said. "I don't want anything to become known or published for a few days at least."

"Do you intend to appear before a grand jury to-day?" he was asked.

"I am not going to say a word. Please don't question me, because I won't say a word regarding those threatening letters. The whole thing will come out in the proper way soon."

"What are the nature of those threatening letters?"

"I cannot say."

"It is true that the wife of a Cornell University professor was mentioned by you in the district attorney's office?"

"I have nothing to say."

BURGLAR HUNT IN HOME OF MINISTER

A telephone message that burglars were in the house early to-day sent Sergeant James McNulty of Station 4, Cambridge, and six patrolmen on the jump in the police wagon to the home of the Rev. F. S. Thatcher, at No. 19 Brewster street, in the well residential section. We hear burglars boring in the house," said the voice over the telephone to Sergeant David Stevens. Sergeant McNulty hastily got together Policemen Wyman, Parks, Lafayette Horrigan, Foley and O'Connell. The Thatcher home was searched from cellar to garret, but there was no trace of burglars.

TOWN MENACED BY $15,000 FIRE

NORTH DANA, Oct. 14.—Fifteen buildings were ablaze at one time in a fire that threatened to wipe out the business section of this town and destroyed the Swift River Box Company's plant and the repair shop of the Boston & Albany railroad at the end of the grade of the road. The plant of the box company, which employs 75 men, was totally damaged and the total loss was estimated at $15,000, $12,000 of which is on the box factory.

BOSTON GIRL GETS DIVORCE IN ENGLAND

Cables from London to-day tell the story of a remarkable decree for divorce just granted to Mrs. Clara Frances Warren, formerly Miss Clara F. Dennett, who figured two years ago in a suit in Boston brought against her to recover $300,000 for the George S. Wellman estate.

Mrs. Warren, a very beautiful woman went to Europe after the courts had refused to make her give up the bonds that had been left her by the rich Mr. Wellman, in whose family she had lived, and it was brought out in her suit for divorce that she met and married a man who called himself W. C. Warren and said that he was a Capetown diamond merchant.

Love at First Sight.

"I met my husband in Cairo in February, 1908," Mrs. Warren testified. "It was a case of love at first sight. We became engaged and were married in a month. Then the illusion began to dispel."

Mr. Bayford, the lawyer who appeared in London for Mrs. Warren, said that in reality Warren was a big confidence man known in Australia as "Bill, the Bludger." He admitted that he was known by many other aliases all over Europe and that he had admitted that he had married Mrs. Warren simply for her money.

Story of Boston Suit.

The suit against Mrs. Warren in Boston was brought by the receiver of the Wellman estate. On the witness stand she said:

"I had known Mr. Wellman twenty-four years. I was a member of his family for fifteen years. He had always told me I should have something. About August 20, 1903, we went together to the Old Colony Trust Company's vaults. I examined the contents of his box. There were two other boxes in the vault, one with the name of Mr. Wellman on it, the other with no name on it.

"He told me that he wanted to give me the power of attorney, so that I could go there at any time and get hold of the boxes. When he was on his death bed he gave me a bunch of several keys and told me that they were the keys to the boxes."

Mrs. Warren took the bonds and the court sustained her in the act. It is probably this estate that "Bill, the Bludger," was after.

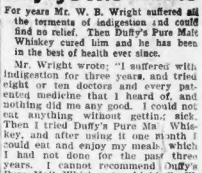
Saturday morning will be children's day at which all school children will be admitted free. On Thursday evening the manufacturers will hold a banquet in the new State Armory on Hood way. On Saturday afternoon City Hall will be dedicated and Governor Draper, Mayor Fitzgerald, Senator Lodge, Congressman Roberts and Ex-Senator Wilfred Howell of Chelsea will speak.

Enjoys His Meals

For years Mr. W. B. Wright suffered all the torments of indigestion and could find no relief. Then Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey cured him and he has been in the best of health ever since.

Mr. Wright wrote: "I suffered with indigestion for three years, and tried right or ten doctors and every patent medicine that I heard of, and nothing did me any good. I could not eat anything without getting sick. Then I tried Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey, and after using it one month I could eat and enjoy my meals, which I had not done for the past three years. I cannot recommend Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey too highly." W. B. Wright, 1102 Beverly St., Richmond, Va.



Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

Indigestion and dyspepsia are the most common and most distressing of modern diseases, and are the cause of much ill health. If you are to get the proper nourishment from the food you eat it must be well digested and properly assimilated.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is a form of food already digested, and when taken just before a meal stimulates the mucous surfaces and little glands of the stomach to a healthy action, causing a sufficient flow of the gastric juice to digest the food and it promotes perfect assimilation. If continued it will cure the diseased or weakened function by its tonic and stimulating effect, it also excites the flow of saliva for the digestion of starchy food, preventing fermentation in the stomach and bowels.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is sold in SEALED BOTTLES ONLY by all druggists, grocers and dealers or direct, $1.00 a large bottle. Look for the "Old Chemist" on the label. Medical booklet containing rare commonsense rules for health and testimonials, also doctor's advice, sent free to any one who writes.

COFFIN-SHAPED BOX PROTECTS BARNEY IMAGE

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14.—What is the Barney statue? When was it placed on the lawn of the fashionable residence in Massachusetts avenue? Who placed it there? And why? Does it represent the beauty of Miss Natalie C. Barney, or is it the likeness of some maid of antiquity? These are questions that are being asked in diplomatic, social and official circles, and no one can reply with certainty.

The Hindu father of the Barney home, who answers to the strange name of Only, caused the statue to be placed in a coffin-like box and holds the key to the lid. The lid may be lifted if Only is properly approached. Within the last two days vandals have, with charcoal and colored crayons, written various remarks on the statue. It was to prevent a repetition of this sort of work, as much as to protect the figure from the gaze of the curious, that Only caused it to be placed in its box.

Positive denial that Miss Natalie was the model for the statue came in a cable from Mrs. Barney and both her daughters. It corroborated the statement of Mme. Ali Kuli Kahn, wife of the charge d'affaires of the Persian Legation, that the statue on the lawn must be "some sort of an image."

To deepen the mystery J. Brys, a well-known local sculptor, asserted that Miss Natalie's figure was shown in the statue, and that the original was locked up in his studio in Farragut square. He added that the figure on the lawn was only a copy.

"I do not want any more notoriety about the thing," he exclaimed, "and so have concluded that the best thing to do is to destroy the statue."

"Have you received orders from Mrs. Barney to do this?" he was asked.

"I do not care to make any further statement," he replied.

Among the gossips it is remarked that attention was first called to the presence of the statue on the Barney lawn by a Washington newspaper, which suggested that it should be covered from public gaze by the police.

The mountain is east of the 141st meridian. The height of Mt. McKinley is 20,480 feet.

MENDUM ON TRIAL ON FRAUD CHARGE

Charles A. Mendum, father of Georgia Drew Mendum, the actress, and uncle of Ethel Barrymore, is on trial before Judge Dodge and a jury in the United States District Court to-day, charged with using the mails in a scheme to defraud. The Government alleges that Mendum sold lots of alleged investors who were worth $50,000 or more and who were willing to invest their money in Southern real estate. The Government claims that many of the names of men on the lists were of those who had been dead several years, and in one instance one of the men is employed in a Boston department store.

LEITER HOME READY FOR TAFT NEXT SUMMER

BEVERLY, Oct. 14.—President and Mrs. Taft spent the entire afternoon to-day in house hunting. In the President's auto they made a tour of the houses that have been suggested to them for occupancy next year. Mrs. Levi B. Leiter of Chicago has offered them her new house at Beverly Farms. The house at present is unoccupied, but will be ready for occupancy early next Spring.

The President and family may be the first to occupy this handsome home as Mrs. Leiter expects to be abroad the greater part of next Summer. Other houses that they looked at are the William Endicott homestead, just below them on the shore line, and the home of Mrs. Henry W. Peabody on Corning street.

President Taft has only three days left in which to select a Summer home before he leaves for Washington. He is going back to the capital on Monday. If he does not decide on a "cottage" before he departs he will leave it to one of the selectmen to rent for a real estate man. They have looked over many fine houses in Far Farms, Manchester, Magnolia and Gloucester. Rents are up to the top-notch figure in Beverly, and even at the highest prices it is difficult to get a house near the shore where the President wishes to be. John Hays Hammond wants Mr. Taft to take a home in Magnolia or Gloucester.

Early to-day the President and Captain Archie Butt, went out on the golf links of the Myopia Golf Club for their morning game.

The President has announced that he will visit the Panama Canal early in November. He will make the trip on board a cruiser. Problems of canal construction and administration have impelled him to make this decision.

ROUNDED UP IN MARKET CHASE

After an exciting chase, in which scores of market men joined, William Ford, aged twenty-nine, of No. 689 Shawmut avenue, was captured by Patrolman Buckley of the City Hall avenue station early to-day on the charge of attempting to steal $150 worth of food supplies from the Ryder-Roberts Provision Company, No. 46 South Market street.

Until two weeks ago Ford, who is colored and who is known in the market district as the "Smoky beef carrier," was employed by the Ryder-Roberts company. Yesterday he was hired by the concern as an extra hand. When the other employes left the place last night Ford concealed himself. It is said, in the rear of the store. Early to-day Patrolman Buckley was making the rounds of the market district. He saw a head pop out of a door on the Chatham street side of the store. Then the chase began.

ENDS MISERY FROM INDIGESTION OR A SICK, SOUR, GASSY STOMACH.

The question as to how long you are going to continue a sufferer from Indigestion, Dyspepsia or out-of-order stomach is merely a matter of how soon you begin taking some Diapepsin.

If your Stomach is lacking in digestive power, why not help the stomach to do its work, not with drastic drugs, but a re-enforcement of digestive agents, such as are naturally at work in the stomach.

People with weak Stomachs should take a little Diapepsin occasionally, and there will be no more indigestion, no feeling like a lump of lead in the stomach, no heartburn, Sour risings, Gas on Stomach or Belching of undigested food, Headaches, Dizziness or Sick Stomach, and besides, what you eat will not ferment and poison your breath with nauseous odors. All these symptoms resulting from a sour, out-of-order stomach and dyspepsia are generally relieved five minutes after taking a little Diapepsin.

Go to your druggist and get a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin now, and you will always go to the table with a hearty appetite, and what you eat will taste good, because your stomach and intestines will be clean and fresh, and you will know there are not going to be any more bad nights and miserable days for you. They freshen you and make you feel like life is worth living.

MAUREL SEES COMING OF GRAND OPERA IN ENGLISH TONGUE

To Bostonians, who alone of all music lovers in America's cities heard grand opera sung in English years ago under Mr. Savage, the following article, by Charles Henry Meltzer, the distinguished musical critic, in which he tells how New York is soon to have an English grand opera company, should prove interesting. Victor Maurel, the famous baritone, is behind the new venture, and he believes that in time all American cities will have English grand opera.

BY CHARLES HENRY MELTZER.

At or Maurel, the baritone who may to truly said to have "created" the role of Falstaff in Verdi's masterpiece of that name—Maurel, the inimitable Iago of Verdi's "Otello," the Hamlet of Ambroise Thomas's opera, the man who was the idol for so long of many cities—is to resume the lists as a grand opera manager.

As he told me yesterday, he has leased the New Amsterdam Theatre in New York for a series of grand opera performances to begin in January and to end in April next.

That is not all.

When I called on him M. Maurel assured me that his chief object in organizing his projected season was to prove, beyond doubt or question, that opera, even "grand opera," could be sung in English.

Plans Sunday Concerts.

This is not the first time that the long famous baritone has played the opera manager. Years ago he leased what was then known as the Theatre Lafayette in Paris. It is now the Theatre Sarah Bernhardt, for a season of Italian opera. It was there that Emma Calve and Edouard de Reszke became famous.

Three performances weekly, opening on January 2, will be given at the New Amsterdam. The season will be prolonged if the financial results so far satisfactory till the end of April. Sunday concerts will be provided for in M. Maurel's scheme. But let will not be neglected. And, according to M. Maurel, the singers who will appear at his performances will include stars of worldwide reputation and young American artists of promise.

Surprises in the singing line are promised. But my lips are sealed. New operas will be tried in the original French and Italian. Two works, at least, and perhaps five or six, will be performed in the vernacular. The correlatives are "Falstaff" (with which the season will open) and "Tales of Hoffmann." The possibilities are a short opera by Malo Servez Massenet's "Thais" and "Jongleurde Notre Dame," and Gretry's "Le Caldron Parlant."

Maurel Gives Reasons.

"I believe sincerely," said M. Maurel, "that there are enough lovers of opera in New York to fill two opera houses.

"I believe that the time has come when grand opera can be produced in English.

"The vernacular should have a place reserved for it at least equal in importance to that given to foreign languages, if not more important.

"Every country in the world except the United States already enjoys the opera in its own vernacular. Why should not opera be heard and enjoyed here in English?

"If it is rightly sung, English is almost as agreeable to the ear as Italian. In certain works I feel that it is absolutely demanded. One of these is, of course, 'Falstaff.'

Proves His Claims.

"When I was rehearsing the part of the fat knight in Milan I told Boito, who wrote the Italian libretto, that it was impossible to give the right value or expression to some phrases and scenes in the opera without using the English idiom. I do not speak your language. But I can understand its beauties. Long years ago I was laughed at in London when I declared that English could be sung clearly and give pleasure. I offered to prove my assertion. That caused more laughter.

"But for two months I worked and read and studied the pronounciation of the words in certain English songs, among them Edgar's 'Pipes of Pan.' At last I announced a recital at which I would sing eight songs in the vernacular.

"The hall in which I appeared was crowded. The critics were all there, expecting to hear something humorous. Great was their amazement when they discovered that I had succeeded in making my songs not only intelligible but musical. They said so, very handsomely, in their reviews next day.

"English must be sung here in opera. It is logical. It is inevitable. Every one I meet seems interested in the question.

Two New Stars.

"If opera singers would only give as much attention to English as to German or Italian, they would soon master the difficulties of English diction. Is it not natural that Americans should wish to understand what they hear in opera.

"In my repertory at the New Amsterdam I shall have new works by modern composers, besides older masterpieces. The modern French school will more especially be represented by the 'Aphrodite' and 'Le Jail Polonais' the Polish Jew, of Camille Erlanger. I have acquired the exclusive rights to both operas and shall produce them simultaneously.

"Gluck's 'Armide,' sung in French; 'Don Giovanni,' sung in Italian; and 'Aida' will also be in my repertoire. In 'Aida' I shall present two new stars to the American public.

"One of the attractions of the season will, I hope, be a ballet entitled 'Daphne,' with music by a young German composer. A pupil of Humperdinck. The scenario has been invented by Mrs. Benjamin Guinness.

"Negotiations are now pending between M. Maurel and a well-known conductor in Europe.

The backers of M. Maurel in his ambitious enterprise are for the present to remain anonymous. So are the singers who, if all goes well, are to appear at the New Amsterdam during the opera season.

CALL FERRER A MARTYR TO PATRIOTISM

At a mass meeting in Faneuil Hall held in honor of Francisco Ferrer, who was executed in Spain a year ago for his alleged connection with the Barcelona riots, the death of the noted Socialist was characterized as a "judicial murder," and as "the execution of a man of high aspirations by corrupt politicians and at the instigation of a corrupt church."

The first of these characterizations came from the presiding officer, Franklin H. Wentworth, while the second occurred in the address of Edwin D. Mead. The other speakers included Frank B. Sanborn, E. H. Clement and Charles Zueblin.

Chairman Wentworth referred to the brave life of Ferrer as imposing an obligation upon America.

"The execution of Ferrer," he said, "was a military murder. He was tried, sentenced and executed by a body of soldiers. Here at the beginning of the twentieth century you see a man tried before a military court without being allowed to produce witnesses for himself or cross-examine the opposing witnesses. It is against such proceedings as this in any part of the world that Faneuil Hall is called upon to protest."

Edwin D. Mead said: "Ferrer was really put out of his way because he was a dangerous rationalist, and the authorities found a good occasion to make way with him. But the blood of the martyrs is the seed of the church. Ferrer dead is a thousand times more powerful than Ferrer living. Men who love liberty and humanity the world over will keep his memory green."

Charles Zueblin said: "Ferrer died for his principles. There is no need of endorsing his beliefs or his character; no need of glossing over his defects to find reason to admire his courage and celebrate his martyrdom. It is neither necessary nor desirable to approve of his Anarchistic views, even if they were, as claimed by his friends, only impossible zour to defend or ignore his having a mistress, even if the laws of Spain prevented a divorce. We are concerned with the two great facts that he had principles which he advocated to the death, inflicted on him by Spain for the exercise of freedom of speech; and, secondly, that we rarely use such courage in the advocacy of our principles, and when we do we find freedom of speech restrained in this country."

20 DRIVEN OUT BY EARLY FIRE

A score of persons living in the three-and-a-half story brick dwelling at No. 224 West Springfield street, South End, were driven into the street by smoke early today, following the discovery of a fire in the walls between the second and third floors.

They were assisted to the street by Patrolman James Murphy and Reserve Officer Edward Fitzgerald of the East Dedham street station. The fire was confined to the second floor and caused a damage estimated at $100.

The fire was discovered by Miss Anna Berg and Miss Forsythe, both of whom occupied rooms on the second floor. Their rooms were filled with smoke and they quickly aroused Charles L. Mahoney, who runs the lodging house. Other lodgers in the house were quickly aroused and all fled to the street safely and. Mahoney, after carrying his two children to the street, sounded an alarm. An overheated chimney is said to have caused the blaze which burned through the walls into two rooms.

CATCH MAN AFTER CHASE

After a long chase through the Public Garden early to-day, Penn I. Richards, thirty-five, colored, of No. 14 Arlington street was captured by two policemen and locked up charged with assault upon Esteven Cifre of No. 34 Carver street, and Daniel E. W. Williams of No. 277 Massachusetts avenue. Both were slashed across the face, receiving wounds that required several stitches. Richards told the police he was walking through Church street when Cifre and Williams attacked him and in order to escape injury he defended himself. The cries of the wounded men attracted the attention of two policemen who were standing a short distance away. They saw Richards fleeing through the Public Garden, but were obliged to chase him some distance before he was captured.

W. R. HEARST MADE MEMBER OF AERO SOCIETY

NEW YORK, Oct. 14. In recognition of his services to aeronautic progress William Randolph Hearst, donor of the $50,000 prize for the first aeroplane across the American continent, was unanimously elected last night an honorary member of the Aeronautic Society of New York in order to honor those who signally aided the advance of aerial transportation the society now has added to its roster a gold medal of merit, the first one to be awarded was Mr. Hearst.

Resolutions were adopted reciting the many important benefits which would result from the flight across the continent, and on both commending the liberal and sportsmanlike conditions of the contest as well as the preliminary arrangements in case of mishap during the flight. Aviators who will fly over the route mastered by A. L. Westgard, chairman of the Aeronautic Touring club, on his journey from coast to coast. Praise also was bestowed upon the New York American for the intelligent, accurate and impartial manner in which it reports aeronautic news.

This action on the part of the Aero Club Society is peculiarly appropriate. It has a membership of more than 400, the majority of whom are actively engaged in aeronautic experiments or by aeroplane transactions.

Has Distinguished Roster.

It has a distinguished roster, headed by Hudson Maxim, inventor of various high explosives and brother of Sir Hiram Maxim, vice president Clifton L. M. Berg lon, Jr. Lee DeForest, inventor of the wireless, Clifford B. Harmon, the million aire auto champion aviator, Dr. Herbert P. Parker, the noted explorer, S. H. Gardenaire, the author, John F. O'Rourke, the engineer, Henri Farman, the pioneer aviator, Octave Chanute known as the father of modern aviation, and other noted scientists and public men are among the active members.

The Aeronautic Society was the first organization of its kind to secure grounds for the flights and experiments of its members. Originally it carried on its work at Morris Park race track, but now it has the largest aerodrome shed in the world at the aviation centre near Mineola. It was the first organization in America to hold a successful aviation meet, on that occasion Glenn H. Curtiss exhibited the craft purchased by the society which was the first to fly south America.

Woman Aviator Elected.

More than 200 members were present last night at the meeting in the society's headquarters at Broadway and sixty eighth street. Mrs. Theodosia Lacey Burrage presided in the absence of some members of the board of governors.

Mr. Burridge presented to Mrs. Francesca Bird Lee a medal set with rubies, diamonds and sapphires for her successful flights at Mineola recently. Mr. Burridge drew attention to the fact that Mrs. Burridge is not only the only woman in America to receive a pilot's aviation rights in a contest, but the only woman who has ever driven a flying aeroplane. The rules were suspended during the membership meeting, when Mrs. Burridge was elected member six after the presentation.

How Cubs and Athletics Line Up

KLING vs. THOMAS Behind the Bat

This is the fifth of a series of articles comparing the individual players of the Cubs and Athletics. It is written by the baseball writer of the Chicago American, who has watched the Cubs at short range.

By Bill Bailey.

There are mighty few fans who are willing to concede that the Athletic catching staff has anything on the Cubs. Most you will find a few down in Philadelphia. But the great majority of the fans in the east as well as in the west, rate the Cubs' catchers with the best in the business. In the list of the All-Star teams and championship battles

Which is a pretty unexpected [illegible] when you take the catching staff of the Cubs it is one of the best in either league.

Take John Kling, for instance. Where will you find a better catcher? And Archer? When it comes to throwing he is one of the best men in either league. Needn't mind his a good catcher.

Now the Athletic catchers [illegible] teams the best one in the [illegible] Livingston and Dykes are pretty good at the backstop work. And if both they that the American League managers, if given his pick of the two players in the league, would select either of Lapp or Livingston to such [illegible] Barry, Collins, Baker, Strunk, Lajoie, Speaker, Cobb and Sweeney of the Big Leagues.

Kings to Do Most of the Work.

Kling will probably do the major part of the catching for the Cubs this year. Archer has not said [illegible] but it is reasonable to suppose that [illegible] Kling has a pretty much of a [illegible] year. We don't think the fans watched him much closely to see whether he would be the King of old. You know he was out of the game [illegible] year. Well, some of the more pessimistic fans wondered when he came back whether he would be as good as he was in the years gone by. They did not realize that his absence of the game would harm him. Apparently it did not.

That old whip of his was as stinging as the [illegible] ever was. And he was batting the ball [illegible] That was old long distance clout and [illegible] it always was. He was [illegible] with the old [illegible] and [illegible] is the class of the league. He is a cinch for the season.

Kling looks to be of a higher class than either or any of the backstops on Connie Mack's payroll.

Archer [illegible] Archer has been [illegible] with [illegible] he has been playing [illegible] and [illegible] that the [illegible] in reality [illegible] In which [illegible] the good [illegible]

THE LATEST STYLES IN KNITTING AND CROCHETING

Something New for Baby—A Crocheted Bath Robe.

It is called a bath robe, but that is only one of its many uses. You will find it one of the handiest things in baby's wardrobe. It is long, loose and warm without being heavy or clumsy. Besides it is pretty—very pretty. These diminutive garments are easily and quickly made of Fleisher's Dresden Saxony—the favorite "baby" yarn.

It has a soft, delicate thread, delightful to the touch, beautiful in appearance. Make some of these garments for your baby friends. They are ideal Christmas gifts.

Full directions for making this and many other new and staple articles may be found in the new (eighth) edition of Fleisher's Knitting and Crocheting Manual, an invaluable handbook for beginner and expert. Contains a complete course of instruction in the various stitches and is the only authoritative guide to fashion in articles made of yarns.

Desperate Desmond

The horse is so hungry that he'll risk his life for a feed of oats. Claude doesn't care much for oats, but when the horse goes, he goes. Such is life.

But there are other horses, and they all like oats. There's only enough for one; first come, first served. Will Claude's horse be it. Perhaps—and perhaps not.

The sorrel horse wins. Claude is tied to is a bay. Figure it out for yourself. If the bay loses, Claude wins; or, at least, he gets another chance.

The one Claude for keeps. If he can't throw Claude over to precipice, he can at least drag him over the roughest roads in the vicinity.

Desperate Desmond may be foiled, but not he. "A horse! A horse! My kingdom for a horse!" says the man with the busted auto. And Desmond, seeing the force of his argument, gracefully ducks his nut.

Whereupon our brave hero rides away in a one-horsepower automobile. But what will Desmond do next? That remains to be told—in the next pictures.

Society Set Preparing for Town Functions

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

Things seem to be "looking up" socially speaking, and as dates are being set for various dances and other functions and the smart set gradually comes trooping back to town, it makes one realize that the "real" season is near at hand.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank S. Chick of the Vendome have sent out invitations for a dance which they are giving there on the evening of Friday, October 21, from 9:30 until 12. Regrets are to be sent to Magnolia, where the Chicks still linger at their villa on Hesperous avenue.

Miss Elizabeth Gray has issued invitations for a luncheon which she is to give at the Tuileries Wednesday, December 7.

Mrs. C. Minot Weld of Readville will give a dance at the Tuileries on Thursday, November 10.

Society and friends of the members of the First Corps Cadets will be glad to learn that there will be a series of five promenade concerts given at the Cadet Armory this Winter on the following dates: November 17, 1910; December 15, 1910; January 20, 1911; February 22, 1911, and March 24, 1911. These dances in the past have been quite military affairs. The corps members, who appear in their attractive full dress uniforms, members of other commands in full dress of their respective organizations, and the ladies in their handsome evening gowns, have made these dances very brilliant affairs. The dates for the other entertainments which are to be given will be announced at a later date. The committee in charge this year is as follows: Lieutenant P. H. Clapp, Chairman; Lieutenant W. F. Hollis, Sergeant B. Knapp, Sergeant W. Bafnm, Treasurer; Private W. J. Battilani, Sergeant E. M. Brush, Sergeant G. H. Farwell, Private D. B. Kenilston, Sergeant B. S. Luther, Private R. E. Nichols, Sergeant E. Fields, Private P. J. Kovach.

Mrs. G. K. Warren and Miss Emily B. Warren, who visited a short while in town have returned to their villa on Narragansett place at Newport, where they will remain several weeks longer before returning to their town house on Marlboro street.

The George Mandells have come up from their Summer place at Beverly and are at their Commonwealth avenue residence for the Winter. Mr. and Mrs. N. W. Rice, who are back again at Beverly Cove after a delightful motor trip up the Hudson will come into town on the 20th.

Dr. Robert Means Lawrence and his daughter, Miss Madeline Lawrence, who spent the Summer and early Autumn at their Mattapoisett villa, are again at their town house on Ray State road.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Wigglesworth, who spent the Summer at Jackson, N. H., have returned to Manchester for a few weeks' stay prior to opening her town house on Beacon st.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph W. Woods, who have been at their Summer estate on Jerusalem road, Cohasset, have returned to their town house on Chestnut street.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Pope and their son and daughter, who have been at Crow Point for the Summer are again at their Brookline home for the Winter.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Parkman and their daughters, Miss Mary and Miss Edith Parkman, have closed their cottage at Northeast Harbor and are again at their town house on Commonwealth avenue.

The George L. Crockers, who spent the Summer at Marion, have returned to town and are at the Parkman wolfe their house on Marlboro street is being made ready for their occupancy.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Elliot Guild and their family, who have been for the Summer at Nahant, have returned to their town house on Marlboro street.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Stanton Blake, who have been visiting their relatives in and around Boston are now the guests of Charlottesville, Va., of Mrs. Howard, Mrs. Blake's sister. They are planning to return to France on the 30th. Mr. and Mrs. George Bent Blake have closed their estate, "Pine Needles," at Lenox, and are in Wellesley, where they are with Mrs. Blake's mother, Mrs. Arthur Bunnewell. They will be in Wellesley for two months and at the end of that time will open their Lenox home for the Winter.

TWELFTH INSTALMENT

UPON the oilskin covered lap several letters with which Mrs. Ellerton Smythe toyed nervously as she spoke.

"My dear child, I am so sorry to bring you down at this unearthly hour," she said, "but it is a matter of business. I have had some quite dreadful news. Indeed, I am utterly prostrated—utterly! I don't think I shall ever raise my head again."

"What is it?" Beatrice asked in concern. "Can I help—can I do anything?"

She felt almost ashamed of her momentary glance at the breakfast tray as she saw the bliss eyes of the woman in the bed fill with tears.

"No, no, my dear Miss Charters; you can do nothing. Don't be concerned about me—after all, I have got my two children. It is for you I am concerned."

"For me?" A quick note of apprehension thrilled in Beatrice Charters's voice. What did she mean—had she heard anything? Had the village gossip of the week had crouched so silently, so unseen, sprung at last?

"For you, yes. The fact is that Charrie has gone broke. Oh, you may well look puzzled. It came upon me like a thunderclap. It is all this wretched rubber business; he told me we were going to spend our fortune, and now we are ruined—ruined!" She wept openly into a minute handkerchief, edged elaborately with lace. "I'm afraid I hardly understand," Beatrice said, in a still voice.

"Don't understand?" There was irritation in Mrs. Ellerton Smythe's voice. "Then, in plain English, girl, it means this; I can't afford to keep you in my employment another week. All the servants must be dismissed—I doubt if I shall even be able to afford to keep my nurse."

She paused, awed into silence perhaps by something in the white face of the girl before her.

"Surely it is very sudden?" That was all Beatrice could force her trembling lips to say.

"Suddenly? Well, yes, in a way. But I have been expecting it for some time. I couldn't enter into confidences all at once with you; you were a stranger to me, you will understand. But Charrie had had nervous breakdowns over the rubber boom. His medical man has ordered him to leave London—at all events, he was ordered to Brussels, and only he had listened to reason and gone then! But perhaps things will right themselves. At present I am hopeful—very hopeful. At least we can live—for we have left the house furnished for three months."

AND then Beatrice understood. She had been used as a convenience by this woman . . . for a week, for a fortnight—until the time for her to be let had come; this woman had made use of her services. Her eyes were dim suddenly with indignant tears, tears of her pride would not allow to fall.

"The agreement between us was for the month, I think," she said with an effort.

"Yes, you have to arrange all matters of business with Mr. Smythe. You will remain in the bed either, as she dismissed the servants."

Outside in the corridor leading from the bedroom Beatrice came face to face with Mr. Smythe. He looked at her curtly and, would have passed on with a contemptuous "Good morning," but Beatrice stopped him.

"Can you spare me a few moments?" she said desperately. "Mrs. Ellerton Smythe has asked me to discuss some business details with you."

IT was very cold, after a week of brilliant sunshine, and warm, fanning winds, that had brought out the green leaves on the trees in the parks and gave gay Summer garments and sunshades into the streets; Winter had returned to London again in strong force, seeming out Spring and all thought of the "month-old of May" before a bleak wind, laden with driving rain.

It was very cold, so cold that Beatrice Charters, in her tiny room at the top of the great, gaunt house in the square that she described on evil days, shivered and pressed her head, cramped with writing, against her breast to try and thaw the chill blood, though she wore her Winter jacket, and was wrapped round the knees with both the thin blankets from her bed. Perhaps, had she been less hungry, she might have felt less cold, but hunger is the key that unlocks every gate before every breath of chill.

When she had had the money in Berwick, where for one week she had tasted the wonder of full-throated freedom, had been miserable enough, not despairing, hopeful, in whom the will had returned, the arrangement of business details had proved honorably enough; in his own way Mr. Smythe was kind. He was sorry and not responsible for her engagement and abrupt dismissal. Beatrice had felt this sorry for the big, shy man, forced into apologies and explanations which were not difficult to make without being disloyal to his wife.

The Dwindling Coins

"Your engagement with Mrs. Ellerton Smythe was for the month, I believe," he had said, not looking up; then hastily, with a show of embarrassment as though this of his wife he added: "But we will not quarrel over terms, Miss Charters. I feel it is the least I can do, but"—he looked at her with a sudden white-toothed smile—"let us think it round numbers and say £2, and that will relieve us of any sense of obligation which either of us in the matter of books."

Beatrice had made a movement forward. She could not trust herself to speak, but with a show of dignity as spoken as that of his wife he added: "But we will not quarrel over terms.

U. S. IMPORTS MUCH COTTON

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14.—The United States, greatest cotton producing country of the world, imported 511,072,091 pounds of raw cotton, valued at $15,816,138, in the fiscal year 1910, the second largest year's importation of cotton in the history of the country.

Most of the imported cotton came from Egypt, according to a report of the bureau of statistics of the Department of Commerce and Labor, though some came from Peru and Asia. The average price was about 30 per cent higher than that which ruled for American cotton.

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

All commission houses report many customers anxious to buy on reactions, for the opinion is now general that word has been given to carry on a sustained campaign.

Of the developments in favor of higher prices, perhaps the most important is the report that Senator Root may be appointed Chief Justice of the United States. This tickled financial interests. It is believed in State street that in order to get laws acts passed by enough to fill the positions on the Supreme Court President Taft will be compelled to select men who have spent most of their time in recent years practicing corporation law. The financial world believes this will insure such decisions in the cases now before the court as to reassure business men.

The Standard oil people do not expect to win their case. The best proof is that they have arranged a programme for handling the Standard oil business in conformity with an adverse decision. Some details remain unsettled but in general the plan is to sell the properties of the Standard oil Company of New Jersey to six or seven corporations. Stockholders of the present company can have cash for their equity, or they can take it out in stock of the seven new corporations. Of course, they will take stock.

Strength of Erie attracted unusual attention, but the advance is natural in view of the remarkable gross earnings reported for the last year. Erie has been in the hands of unofficial receivers for more than a year. It will be remembered that at the time the Erie was trying to join the Public Service Commission of New York State into permitting it to issue bonds secured in part by unsold securities of other lines an officer of the company announced that the railroad would be put into receivership on the authority of the officer, the information being received at first hand, the report was published in this column. So much excitement in the stock market followed the announcement that plans were changed and the receivership was made unofficial. As a result of the drastic management of these unofficial receivers, Erie has apparently passed through the valley of shadow into safety. It might be dangerous to go behind the official report, but on its surface it shows Erie to be a rejuvenated property.

Southern Railway, or as Wall street nicknames it, "The Erie of the South," surprised the financial community with a gratifying monthly report of earnings for the year ended June 30. It showed that the system had done the largest business in its history, and that the balance available for dividends was equal to 9.36 per cent. on the $60,000,000 of outstanding preferred stock. This compares with 5.98 per cent. in the previous twelve months.

It is reported on good authority that the Guggenheims over cotton bids of today is virtually settled. The rise in cotton, however, is regretted, as it has been found that the price of this staple would stay at levels tempting to foreign buyers. But upon the other hand, the further decline in grain is a decided encouragement.

In connection with the sale of 200,000 shares of Inspiration Copper stock at $10 a share, it is stated that work will commence at once on the proposed 5,000-ton mill. The company has financed for at least two years. The purchasers of the stock include Hayden, Stone & Co., Thomson, Towle & Co. and other interests who are identified through actual control or partial ownership of Utah Copper, Nevada Con., Ray Con., Chino, Mason Valley and other porphyry mines.

The Iron Age says the new business being received by steel mills shows an extent that is astounding. Orders received this month have been very close to the rate in September, the Baltier lines making up for the falling off in the heavier products. The export trade promises to equal last year's. The purchasers of the Ark include Hayden Stone & Co., Thomson, Towle & Co. and other interests who are identified through actual control or partial ownership of Utah Copper, Nevada Con., Ray Con., Chino, Mason Valley and other porphyry mines.

In the copper trade it is good opinion that the red metal will quickly follow any decided betterment in iron and steel. Among the copper producers the determination to conserve the metal until such time as consumption catches up with production is becoming stronger, and copper shares are beginning to feel the impulse of the changed business policy.

JUDGE COLT SAYS TO CONVERT THE MINISTERS FIRST

I believe that nine-tenths of the ministers think that a man ought to be prepared for heaven; so far as heaven is concerned the ministry is a training school. I don't mean that they don't care for their people, but I do believe that the church, as a church, doesn't take care of its people. I believe that the ministers first ought to be converted. I would teach them that their work here is me only for a man's soul, but for the body. I believe that when we have converted the ministers they will have learned that they must get at the people as they are, and not as they want them to be. Not until the ministers are converted can the church convert the people.—Judge Alfred Colt, at Congregational Brotherhood meeting.

$10,000 SENT TO IRELAND TO AID HOME RULE

Ten thousand dollars was forwarded today to the trustees of the Irish Parliamentary Fund in Dublin by T. B. Fitzpatrick, national treasurer of the United Irish League. This is the first instalment of the amount pledged at the recent Buffalo convention.

T. P. O'Connor's tour of Canada in the interest of home rule for Ireland has already resulted in financial results of the most gratifying nature. At a meeting in Montreal the response to Mr. O'Connor's appeal reached $5,000.

At his Ottawa meeting, Sir Wilfred Laurier, who presided, declared that until Ireland was given the rights that Canada possessed, England could expect no peace. Ireland's treatment, said the Canadian statesman, was the one great stain on the escutcheon of Great Britain.

Because of expected action in Parliament on the question of the veto of the House of Lords, Mr. Redmond, M. P., has been summoned home by cable. The Irish leader will sail from New York on Saturday, November 5. All his speaking dates after November 4 have had to be cancelled. Those include meetings that had been arranged in Holyoke, Worcester and Springfield.

Almost everybody in Boston reads the AMERICAN.

Editorial for a Lady Who Wants to Write

It May Interest Others

Copyright, 1910, by American-Journal-Examiner

A lady wishing to be an author asks for advice. The letter sent to her may be of use to others. Here it is:

We believe that you can learn to write, but you will have to climb a difficult hill.

The way to sell a manuscript is to write the material on a typewriter. Cut out every word that you can cut out, improve every phrase that you can improve, rewrite it, then send it with stamps and a personal note to the particular editor that you select, expecting to get it back.

You will probably get it back as long as you write only ordinary stuff, and for a while, perhaps, after you write good stuff. If you have it in you, you will succeed.

You should have some other way of making a living while trying to write.

You will not feel so badly about your failures if you realize that YOU are of some importance to YOURSELF and that thinking and writing carefully are educating YOU and improving your mental processes —a good thing even though you should never have the pleasure of being read by others.

Do not pay somebody to write your articles or stories on a typewriter for you. You can learn in two weeks to write well enough on a typewriter by practising two hours a day, and the time need not be wasted, as you can also practise composition while you practise on the typewriter.

If you haven't money to buy a typewriter, you can rent one, or, perhaps, you can buy one on the instalment plan. In a short time you will find yourself able to compose more easily with the typewriter than with pen and ink.

Buy a good, strong typewriter, one that will stand HARD USAGE—a second-hand one might answer your purpose if it is of a first-class make. But do not buy a second-hand typewriter unless they will let you use it for a couple of weeks to test it, you paying rent and deducting the rent from the purchase price.

After you have written an article or part of one, correct the manuscript roughly. Put it away for a day or two and then correct it again.

You cannot see the defects in your own writing immediately after the writing is done. What comes out of the mind easily and smoothly goes in again just as smoothly—you will see the defects a week later.

Do not be afraid to correct over and over. Remember that Buffon rewrote one of his enormous works eleven times and that other writers have rewritten even more frequently. You have more chance for success by offering for sale 5,000 words of the best stuff you can possibly produce than by offering 500,000 words at random.

A good time to correct is when you are tired of writing. That part of the brain which PRODUCES is very different from that which REVISES and the creative cells can rest and recuperate while you revise.

Read the works of good writers, especially those that have a good style, at least an hour every day.

And write about things, individuals and emotions with which you are familiar.

It may be, of course, that you will never have any financial success as a writer. If so, you must find your satisfaction in the good that the effort to write will do you personally.

Do not think that you must write a great deal.

Emile Zola wrote only five hundred words a day and you know—or rather, we hope you do NOT know—the vast amount he produced.

Better write 500 words a day very carefully than 5,000 carelessly, BUT WRITE REGULARLY. Zola kept before him in his own writing room "Nulla Dies Sine Linea" to remind him that every single day must produce its regular number of lines. If you try your best to write well and simply, telling what YOU actually feel and not what you imagine that you OUGHT to feel, you will develop your mind even if you do not fatten your pocketbook.

The World Shall Hear About This

We Do Not Understand It, but Somebody Does, and if It Is Important

Copyright, 1910, by American-Journal-Examiner

Here is a letter as mysterious to the editor of this newspaper as any cryptogram, or Delphic utterance, cuneiform inscription, or sentence from Henry James, or poem by Maetternich.

All we understand in this letter is the mutilated word meld, which, in its native pure German state, means to announce. Just what this gentleman announced or "melded" we do not know. Perhaps you do. Here are the stirring facts:

Dear Editor—Being a reader of the Boston American, wish you would insert in same, a game of auction pinocle, that three took part in, of which I think is a meld unheard of, for which I should be called King of Pinoclers, mainly after being in a hole for 400 on the first hand dealt; in the second hand I had (8 aces) 1,000, 150 trumps in spades, and 20 in clubs, which left me just one card bare, or a meld of 1,170, which certainly must be a record. Moral Training

By BISHOP CHARLES D. WILLIAMS

A LIFE that is well regulated, guarded, will at some time show the futility of methods of restraint, repression and prohibition—mere negative methods. A positive method is necessary to occupy that life.

In illustration of the fact, take the domestic, social and religious problems which vex us to-day. The moral training and discipline of children, if by a negative method, one of restraint and repression, will be proved futile. And yet that is the way in which a majority of parents or friendly advisers attempt to bring up children.

They say "don't" many times a day, and that very word "don't" suggests the devil which it is wished to avoid. "Don't" is a dam thrown over the stream of a child's life, and it will sooner or later be swept away, when the outbreak comes. The old idea of breaking a child's will worked either in one of two ways—by restraint and repression the child's will was broken, and it became a moral derelict, without power or purpose; or the child developed a will of its own, which broke loose, and blew up, going to the devil.

All mischief is misguided energy. A child needs an outlet for his natural life, and it requires constant thinking on the part of the parents to save the child. The child should be preoccupied with higher interests in order to keep him out of mischief.

Take the juvenile crime problem. I hate that word "juvenile," because I do not believe that there are any criminal boys, and, of course, no criminal girls. Crime hasn't had a chance to soak into the boy's character indelibly, for he is too young; the fault, when there is one, is in the action—not in the boy. It is to be hoped that the city will come to stand in religion to the boy as the parents are supposed to, instead of the traditional stepmother.

Boys, just to express themselves, commit some minor misdemeanor, society knocks them down, puts them in jail, herds them with criminals. Society has accomplished its end—it has made a boy a criminal. That is the negative method, one of restraint and repression. Now, thank God, we have juvenile courts, where advice is given in a fatherly, nay, even in a brotherly, way, some occupation is suggested, and the boy is either redeemed or else he is sent to the "boy farm," where he learns self-government, has a chance to expand, to meet opportunity squarely and to live up to a higher occupation.

We must go on still further, and adopt this method in adult crime. How little society knows, thinks or cares for the slums and poverty. The police, uniformed by society, use the club, they repress their fellow men, they restrain them by means of jails, which are the true colleges and universities of crime. Criminal law is a negative thing, made to deal with men passively—it will never cure men. See what the average workingman's life produces—a dulled, repressed existence.

This lesson is one which needs to be learned by the majority of religious persons. They know but one way to deal with their fellow beings who have erred —that is the negative method, prohibition, restraint and repression. They say, Enforce the law, inflict the penalties.

If the ministers would devote as much energy to establishing playgrounds in our cities as they do to looking upon Sunday baseball with horrified eyes, we might see a different state of affairs. But no, they want to stop something, to put the lid on something.

The Tipster

By PERCY SHAW

HAS it ever been your fortune
On a pleasure-seeking trip
To watch the smiling gentleman
Who gives the biggest tip?
Have you noticed how the waiters
Bow before he heaves in view,
While their scant, infrequent glances
Fall like icicles on you?

Have you sat in patience waiting
While he scanned the bill of fare,
With advice on hidden tidbits
From the minions round his chair?
Have you fretted, growing madder,
And, with lightning in your eye,
Pounded on your empty tumbler
While the moments ambled by?

Yet that's the smiling gentleman
Who scorns his household board,
And always savors the bills are more
Than he can well afford.
Yes, that's the smiling gentleman
Who loves a royal time,
But frowns upon his wife when she
Implores him for a dime.

Little Bobbie He Writes About Votes for Women

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

HUSBAND, sed Ma wen Pa calm in to breakfast. Husband, it will soon be eleckshun day, will it not. Well, sed Pa, yes & no. For me it will, for you it will not.

I am not so sure about that, Ma sed. A lot of us gurls got together the other nite & decided this we wud cast our ballots if that was the last thing we ever did in our lives. We have got it all framed up, Ma sed. We are going to dress up just like men, & we are going to register as men, & then we are going to go & cast our votes for a better and better administrashun.

Now nothing, sed Pa, & do you think you are going to git by with any such a stunt. I doant think you wud look good in men's clothes, sed Pa. Besides, sed Pa, you wud have to chew tobacco. What? sed Ma. Yes, sed Pa, you wud have to chew tobacco, or else smoke stogies. I know, sed Pa, beekuss I have been in politicks, & all my friends in politicks eether smoaks or chews.

How vulgur, sed Ma, that is jest what all of us gurls want to suppress at the poles. We want to mak the voting booths cleaner & better & better for our presens. We want to mak politicks a art, sed Ma, not a common trade.

Well, sed Pa, it is very sweet of you to want to mak a art out of politicks, but a lot of nobel heroes has tried to change this grand trade into a art. Mostly always, sed Pa, they have been flung to the ground & had their teeth kicked out by the men which has talked politicks & lived politicks since they was old enuff to write a check. Keep out, wife, sed Pa, stay at hoam & be wifely & motherly.

I am sick & tired of this wifely & motherly talk, sed Ma, not beekaus I am not a good wife & mother, but beekaus the wifely & motherly talk is all gair to me by a lot of men like you & your frends. All us gurls ever hear from the men folks, Ma sed, is Cook Chops, Cook Chops. Peel Potatoes, Peel Potatoes. Make Cake, Make Cake. My goodness alive, Ma sed, what do you men think we have to live for? Must we dwell within four walls for ever & ever, Ma sed. Must we econekrize our lives to carpet sweepers? No, sed Ma, a thousand times no.

Jest then the door bell rang, & in caim a lot of ladies. Every one (1) of them had a sine on her coat, & the sine sed Gurls, Have You Registered?

Beefore the first lady had begun to speek Pa jumped out of the window. Follow me, Bobbie, sed Pa, this is no place for men folks. Pa took me over to the corner & bought me sum ice cream & then we went & had a long walk. The time is cumming Bobbie, sed Pa, wen all them folks at the house is going to register & vote. You will be a old man, Bobbie, sed Pa, wen that time cums, & yore poor old father will be under the grass. Bobbie, wen the time cums that the ladies must vote, be sure & ask all the ladies to vote as thare conshens dictates. While they are thinking it over, Pa sed, the polls will close.

Then Pa & me went hoam.

Paraphrases

By WEX JONES

HOW dear to this heart are the scenes of my childhood, when fond recollections presents them to view! They seem a lot better now than they did then, but I am glad I saw those scenes anyway, if only to talk about them now.) There was the orchard and the meadow—and I've got to ring in the deep-tangled wild wood in the effort to make a rhyme for childhood (and not a very good rhyme, at that)—and every loved spot which my infancy knew. There was a wide-spreading pond and a mill by the side of it and a bridge over the pond, the bridge being there to enable pedestrians to cross without getting their feet wet. A boat would have been just as good, except that you have to row a boat, whereas a bridge stretches across without help. There was also a rock where the cataract fell, something that never surprised me, because, as the traveler said about Niagara, there was nothing to stop it. The cot of my father was there also, the dairy house nigh it—and also near the cataract, so as to be handy for filling the milk bottles. And o'en dear to my heart is the rude bucket which hung in the well. The old bucket constructed of oak, the bucket bound with iron, the bucket largely covered with moss, the said bucket which hung in the well.

That moss-covered vassel I call as a treasure, for often at noon, when returned from the field, I found it the source of an exquisite pleasure, the purest and sweetest that nature can yield. How ardent I seized it, with hands that were glowing; and quick to the corner for liger I sped, and then, if I could stand off the proprietor, it would soon be overflowing with coolness and froth—that chap always used to put a Coney Island collar on the grounds—the old bucket constructed of oak, the bucket bound with iron, the bucket largely covered with moss, the aforesaid bucket which hung in the well.

How sweet from the green mossy brim to receive it, as poised on the curb it inclined to my lips. (I always used to drink half before taking it home.) And now, for removed from the loved situation, the tears of regret will intrusively swell, as fancy reverts to my father's plantation and sighs for the bucket which hangs in the well. The old bucket constructed of oak, bound with iron and covered with moss, the afore-mentioned bucket which was pendant in the well.
